WEEKLY THE MONTHLY Outlook

Published Every Saturday
13 Astor Place New York

The Outlook will be in 1897, as it has been during each of its twenty-seven years, a History of Our Own Times.

In its various editorial departments The Outlook gives a compact review of the world's progress; it follows with care all the important philanthropic and industrial movements of the day; has a complete department of religious news; devotes much space to the interests of the home; reviews current literature; furnishes cheerful table-talk about men and things; and, in short, aims to give fresh information, original observation, and reasonable entertainment.

Beginning with the fifty fifth volume, the paper will assume the regular magazine size, which will add greatly to its convenience and attractiveness. The Outlook is published every Saturday—fifty-two issues a year. The first issue in each month is an Illustrated Magazine Number, containing about twice as many pages as the ordinary issue, together with a large number of pictures.

The price of The Outlook is three dollars a year in advance, or less than a cent a day.

Send for a specimen copy and illustrated prospectus to The Outlook, 13 Astor Place, New York City.

PRESS COMMENT.

The Eugene Register gives an editorial report of a lecture, said to have been delivered in that city lately by W. C. Hawley, president of the state university, on John Brown, in which the speaker classed John Brown with Wilkes Booth, Charles J. Guiteau, Benedict Arnold and Judas Iscariot and branded him as a cut throat, murderer, liar and traitor.

Now if this man Hawley is correctly quoted, and we hope for the good name of the state and its university that he is not, his proper field is Texas. They would appreciate such sentiments as these in that state and he could command his own salary as a teacher in her schools. There have been more monuments raised to commemorate the memory of John Brown, of Ossawatimie, than Hawley will have friends in Oregon after delivering such a lecture, and the memory of John Brown as a hero and martyr to the cause of human freedom, will live for a thousand years after the memory of Hawley has perished from the earth.—Roseburg Pisaldealer.

When the sap begins to rise and the geese begin to mate, we hear the gentle carol of the country candidate. Oh, he's a jolly fellow and full of vain conceits, and sees a bosom friend in every man he meets. He asks about your family, your horses and your hogs, and he shows a friendly interest in the children and the dogs. Oh, he's a jovial gentleman, as game as a lamb, as billyshome as a meadow lark and happy as a clam. His prospects are the brightest and his chances they are sure; he spends his money freely and helps the needy poor. He goes to church on Sunday and his pious traits appear, but when it's necessary he will then set up the beer. Oh, he's a buoyant, sanguine duck the festive candidate he starts out early in the morn and stays until it's late—his patient wife unlocks the door and with a look of pain, she says: "You needn't tie me; your leg's been pulled 'gain."—Jefferson Review.

Poor old demagogue Harvescott has made another discovery here almost in the close of the 19th century. "Protection is not a principle," shouts the old fraud. Well, would't that drive a man to the insane asylum? If "protection is not a principle," pray, for what have we been fighting for, these many years? Harvescott is up to his old and deceitful tricks, again. A free trader at heart, he will sell his soul for a morsel of postage to turn the eyes of the people away from the importance of a protective tariff—the "principle" that has started more mills in this country, that has put more idle men at work, that has put more money in circulation, that has lifted more mortgages from the homes of poor laboring men than any one other thing that might be mentioned. There is another reason than that of being a free trader that causes Harvescott to make this declaration. He is no more a republican than Grover Cleveland. Protection is and has been for years straight republican doctrine. Upon this issue the republican party has stood a solid phalanx and has won more victories than upon any other "principle" advocated by the party, and as a "principle" it did as much or more for party success in 1896 than did the sound money doctrine, which we presume Harvescott would be pleased to denounce as a "principle." Grover Cleveland is a sound money man; but it was the passage of a free trade bill, which he favored, that brought bankruptcy and ruin to many thousands in this country. Just what old Harvescott means by throwing such a fallacious sophistry before his readers at this time is somewhat of a mystery, unless he deems this the best method by which to defeat the republicans of Oregon this year. But the people will surely see through his little game and checkmate him in it.—McMinnville Transcript.

SCOTT'S SOLILOQUY.

Should Mitchell die? Woe, woe were mine, Beumbed my pen. O, gracious death, Cut thou not short his mortal breath; Else whereupon could my invective dine? For all I think, I feel, I know, Is in him wrapped. He me inspires To daily scolding. Never tires The cyclone of my hate. O, let it blow.

This life to me were cold could I Not daily strike John Mitchell's fame. His downfall is my noblest aim; All hope is gone should John H. Mitchell die. All else I sacrifice to this. Even party triumph's dress to me And "principles" a tangle pie. Talk not of love, for hating is my bliss. "Should he retire?" While I have life I'll pull him from his hiding place. I'll force him out into the race. For Mitchell gone, what care I for the strife.

Should Mitchell die. Then let me die. And I would go where ere he goes. To heights of joys or depths of woes. I hate him and no other creed I know. Corvallis Gazette.
