ON to Porto Rico! On to Spain! are now the twin watchwords of President McKinley and his administration.

SHAFER's great victory would have caused much more rejoicing had it not been accompanied with the announcement that yellow fever had broken out in our army. Everything that science, money and medical skill can do to stamp out the disease is being done.

ELECTRIC roads and bicycles seriously affected the horse business of the country, and horses, except the very best, fell to low prices. The war has changed all that, and the government finds that it has to pay double prices for the animals needed for artillery and cavalry. Two months ago the government was paying from $60 to $75 for cavalry horses; last week the agents of the government were compelled to pay as high as $125 and bought few horses for less than $120. In order to facilitate the purchase of the needed horses the government has lowered the standard to which they must conform, so that now any sound horse between the ages of five and eight and standing 15 1/2 and 15 3/4 hands is regarded as suitable for the cavalry service. Even with this concession the government agents are finding it difficult to get all the horses the government needs. Color is not considered at all. One thing in the government regulations is very sensible—no horse whose tail has been docked can be accepted.

SURVIVORS of the Cervera fleet say that many of the sailors were shot because they could not stand by the guns under the awful rain of death from the American ships. In contrast to that two American sailors stand out vivid as pictures. In the crisis of the battle before Santiago, Corp. Kaene and Private Barr, of battery A, second light artillery, when all their comrades of the battery were dead or wounded, and when they themselves had each been wounded several times, still stood by their guns and worked them as well as they could, intent upon holding them and in turning back the enemy that was assailing them. Neither was working for a commission; neither expected that his work would be recognized; neither expected to survive the battle, but they both understood that they were there to fight, the battle ecstasy was upon them, and they never once thought that by their work they were demonstrating that free institutions are, after all, the fittest nurseries for unconscious heroism.—Salt Lake Tribune.

It might be supposed from the tenor of the European cable news, that negotiations for peace between the United States and Spain were under way. Such is not the case. There has been no negotiations, in fact, no word from Spain on the subject. This government has had an ample sufficiency of negotiating with Spain, and is not likely to countenance any in connection with peace. There will be no need for any. When Spain thinks she has been thrashed sufficiently, she can obtain our terms of peace by asking for them. As they will not be deviated from, there will be no occasion for any negotiations; the terms must be either accepted or rejected at once. The statement that President McKinley had told the terms of peace to a European diplomat, in order that he might make them known to Spain, was a bare-faced lie, with not even a probable foundation. It is not customary for the victorious country to offer terms of peace before they are asked for, and any statement that President McKinley has done so, or that he intends doing so, may be put down as manufactured.

THE FIRE AT ANTELOPE.

The Business Portion Almost Totally Destroyed.

The fire started in Condon's hardwood bowling alley, from a cigar stub thrown in a small box of sawdust. The pin setter, who slept in the alley, awoke just as the flames from the box had ignited the alley, which was saturated with oil. He dashed a bucket of water on the fire, which, instead of putting out the flames, made them spread along the alley with lightning rapidity. Then the pin setter ran for his life, leaving his clothes and about $100 in money to be consumed.

The alley was located in the large Masonic building, on the ground floor, and Mr. Condon, the owner of the alley, and his family had rooms upstairs. Condon escaped by sliding down a rope outside the building used for hoisting water. His wife and daughter dashed down the stairway, through the flames, and were severely burned, the flesh being almost entirely burned off the daughter's feet. Both the ladies are confined to bed, and will be for some time. No other person was burned.

Once started, the fire licked up every building on both sides of the street until it reached the lower end of town, where the buildings were protected by vacant lots. In all 13 buildings were consumed. They were: Bolton's large mercantile store, the Antelope hotel and livery stable, owned by Wm. Jones; the Masonic building, Kirchner's blacksmith shop, Dr. Pilkington's drug store (building owned by F. W. Silvertooth), the postoffice and residence of Postmaster John W. Bennett, the furniture store of Glean & Brown, F. McBeth's hotel and saloon (the Occidental), David Scott's residence, Dial's saloon, occupied by F. W. Silvertooth, and Patterson's barber and butcher shop. The only business buildings saved were the Euraka hotel and saloon, Dickerson's bar and bowling alley, Irvine's store, Antone Nelson's blacksmith shop, and the Herald office. The losses are variously estimated from $70,000 to $150,000, but a conservative estimate places the loss at about $70,000, with insurance about $25,000, divided as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name, Loss. Insurance. Masonic lodge $4,000 $4,000; Condon & Powne 300 300; T. G. Condon 250 250; W. J. Ashby 2,500 2,500; W. D. Jones 2,500 2,500; F. J. Kirchner 2,500 2,500; R. J. Pilkington 2,000 2,000; F. J. Bennett 1,000 1,000; Glean & Brown 1,500 1,500; F. McBeth 6,000 6,000; D. Scott 700 700; F. W. Silvertooth 1,250 1,250; W. Bolton 20,000 20,000; N. W. Wallace 500 500; H. W. Gamble 100 100; G. E. Patterson 2,000 2,000; F. M. Dial 2,000 2,000; John Ogilvie 100 100; M. E. Miller 150 150.

BUNCO MAIL CONTRACTORS.

Ever since the "star route" service was established in this country there has been contractors submitting bids for carrying mails at ruinously low prices, then re-letting them to some poor fellow who undertook the job, and generally went broke. But times are changing, and occasionally one of those big contractors gets bit. This seems to be the case in one of the contracts for carrying mail into Fossil, and is ventilated by the Journal as follows:

"The Eastern mail route 'farmer' who took the new Fossil-Waterman route at ruinously low price, failed to show up as he could not get a sucker to take off his hands, and Postmaster Gates has employed Albin Backingham by the day to carry the mail over this route until other arrangements can be made; and the first trip was made by Albin last Friday, just one week later than the starting time stipulated by the government. Under the present arrangement the route is costing almost three times the amount of the Eastern shark's bid; and nearly twice the amount of the bids of local men. Of course, the difference between the delinquent contractor's bid and the actual cost of supplying the route will come out of the contractor's bond, if it be not a straw one. A similar state of things exists on the Arlington-Fossil line, a much bigger route, which is being temporarily supplied by the day by the former contractor, the new man, also a big Eastern route farmer, having first got 'his foot in it', and then failed to show up."—Times-Mountaineer.

THE STATE FAIR.

Arrangements Being Made for a Splendid Meeting.

The Salem Statesman says: Secretary C. D. Gabrielson, of the state fair board, expects to go to Albany, Eugene and Corvallis in a few days for the purpose of distributing advertising literature for the fair, provide the business men with free envelopes bearing advertising matter, and complete arrangements for the projected excursions, during the fair, from these cities. He is much encouraged over the outlook, and large crowds are expected to come from the three little cities named, and other places along the lines of railroad, passed by the excursion trains.

At the fair grounds space for exhibitions, and for those intending to engage in business, is being rapidly assigned. Among those making applications for space for exhibition purposes being the Mitchell, Lewis & Staver Co., whose farming implements exhibit is promised to be an exceptionally good one; the Studebaker Bros.' wagon factory, which will be represented by the best line of vehicles ever shown here, and the Parlin & Orendorf Co., which will also exhibit implements, these firms realizing that the state fair is a good place to advertise their goods. To accommodate the increased exhibits of farming implements, additional sheds for exhibiting implements will be erected, these being room only for one of the firms making application for space—Studebaker Bros., having been assigned the shed now standing on the grounds.

"SOAPY" SMITH KILLED.

A Well-Known Sure-Thing Man 'Passes in His "Chips".'

With the death of "Soapy" Smith, one of the most notorious gamblers in the United States has passed from earth. A dispatch from Skagway, via Victoria, published recently, states that Smith, while endeavoring to break up a meeting of citizens with a rifle, was shot through the heart by the city engineer. The meeting was held to force some "sure-thing" men to give up $2,700, out of which they had bamboozled a miner. Jefferson Randolph Smith, otherwise known as "Soapy", is known to the police of Portland. He came here 12 years ago and returned in 1886, never operating to any extent in the city. It was currently reported a few months ago that "Soapy" was in town, but this was not so. Smith obtained his nickname at the time he sold soap on street corners, throwing in a prize with each package.

The most audacious act ever attempted by him, and one which gave him notoriety throughout the country, occurred in Denver several years ago. At that time an effort was being made to oust the police commissioners, and indignation meetings were daily being held by the citizens. Smith, who took the part of the police in the fight, mounted the dome of the city hall and threatened to annihilate the crowd below if they made any further demonstration. As he made the threat he waved in his hand a stick of dynamite, which had it been thrown on the pavement, would have killed hundreds of people. The citizens, it is needless to state, made no rash movements.

"Soapy" is also suspected of having killed "Chit" Sparks, a gambler, in Murphy's saloon, in Denver, but no convincing evidence could ever be found against him. Officers declare that Smith wanted to be murdering all the time, continually making gun plays, and keeping himself in trouble. He was a game man, though, and would take more than even chances, as the account of his death shows. On more than one occasion he dispersed crowds with a shotgun or rifle.

He was an all-round bucconer, sure-thing man and gambler, standing in with the three-card monte men. In short, he was a desperate character, leaving a trail of blood behind him wherever he went. When the Klondike boom began he went to Seattle, where he nearly killed a man by beating him with the head. The reason Smith gave for the assault was that his victim had given some information to the police. Since that time Smith's name has been continually before the public. He went to Skagway and immediately proceeded to run the town to suit himself, conducting in the meanwhile a large gambling-house. Recently "Soapy" commenced libel proceedings against a Seattle newspaper, which intimated that he was the instigator of a negro woman's murder in Skagway. The suit will now be dismissed.

The dead gambler was once a politician in Denver. He leaves a wife in St. Louis. Officers state that they have been expecting to hear of Smith's death for years, owing to his fondness for "gunning" other people.

Five Captains.

There were five captains banded to meet—one Russian, one Turk, one Frenchman, one American and one Englishman. One proposed a champagne supper, each one to give a toast of his own native country or pay for the wine drunk after supper.

The Russian—Here's to the stars and bars of Russia, that were never pulled down.

The Turk—Here's to the moons of Turkey, whose wings were never clipped.

The Frenchman—Here's to the cock of France, whose feathers were never picked.

The American—Here's to the stars and stripes of the United States of America, that never failed to defeat.

The Englishman—Here's to the rampant, roaring lion of Great Britain, that tore down the stars and bars of Russia, clipped the wings of Turkey, picked the feathers of the cock of France and ran like a—l from the stars and stripes of the United States of America.—Ex.

SOME persons say it is natural for them to lose flesh during summer.

But losing flesh is losing ground. Can you afford to approach another winter in this weakened condition?

Coughs and colds, weak throats and lungs, come quickest to those who are thin in flesh, to those easily chilled, to those who have poor circulation and feeble digestion.

of cod liver oil with hypophosphites does just as much good in summer as in winter. It makes flesh in August as well as April. You certainly need as strong nerves in July as in January. And your weak throat and lungs should be healed and strengthened without delay.

Hood's Pills. Stimulate the stomach, rouse the liver, cure biliousness, headache, dizziness, sour stomach, constipation, etc. Price 25 cents. Sold by all druggists. The only Pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

OREGON BEATS THE WORLD.

Dr. Shaw Astonished at Wonderful Fertility of Oregon.

The Portland Telegram says: "A flattering tribute to Oregon was paid by Dr. Thomas Shaw, the well known writer and greatest authority on livestock in the United States. Were he to tell the wonderful productive power of this land of plenty to the people of the East, he said they would think him a romancer. To protect his own character for veracity he declared he would not dare to tell the half he had seen without statistics to back him up. 'The Northwest, he pointed out, was the most favored section for raising stock, and in time, when the breeds are bettered, dealers would send from all parts of the world to this section for the superior breed that are sure to be bred here. 'The doctor, in company with Industrial Agent R. C. Judson, left this morning to attend the dairymen's convention in Astoria. It was through the untiring efforts of the energetic industrial agent that Dr. Shaw was induced to visit the Northwest. His writings in all the leading agricultural papers of the United States attract widespread attention, and one can easily divine the benefit Oregon will derive from so distinguished a visitor.'

SHEEP SHEARING CIRCUIT.

From California to Montana and Back Again Wool Clippers Make $8 a Day Each.

Three men, who formed a portion of a shearing crew returned from Montana, passed through Portland yesterday on their way to California. They had been the season's shearing in February, near Sacramento, and followed the work up as they finished through Nevada, Wyoming and Montana, where they helped shear 80,000 head at Merrill, Sweetgrass county, on the banks of the Yellowstone. The price obtained for shearing ranged from 5 cents a head and board in California to 8 cents and board themselves in Montana. They claimed to be able to average 130 head a day, which at 6 cents net would pay each man $7.80 per diem for the four months ending in June.

They expect to begin shearing lambs in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada, when they get back to California, and this job will last them till September, when fall shearing usually begins in that state, where sheep are shorn twice a year. In Oregon and other states of the Northwest shearing is done only once a year, so the wool is much longer and freer from dirt and grass seeds than in California, and is therefore worth usually double the price in the markets of the world.

These men claimed they could each make from $800 to $700 a year by their shears alone, and this would enable them to work in the mines or on the farms during the winter months. Sheepshearing, they aver, is the best paying of all work which the unskilled laborer can engage in. Any one can learn to shear sheep in a few weeks, though high speed comes only after a good deal of practice.—Telegram.

Dreadfully Nervous.
