

ALL of the revenue cutters that were transferred from the treasury department to the navy department at the beginning of the war, have been ordered back into the treasury service, and they will, as fast as possible, resume their peaceful avocation of watching for violators of the tariff laws.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY took occasion, in a letter declining an invitation from General Breckenridge to review the troops at Chickamauga Park, because of his inability to get away from Washington, to say a few words that will do much to soften the bitter disappointment of the thousands of volunteers who had no opportunity to do any fighting. These words were: "The highest tribute that can be paid to the soldier is to say that he performed his full duty. The field of duty is determined by his government, and wherever that chance to be is the place of honor. All have helped in the great cause, whether in camp or battle, and when peace comes all will be alike entitled to the nation's gratitude."

SURGEON-GENERAL STERNBERG has written a general defense of the medical corps of the army and himself from attacks made upon them, many of which he says were instigated by those who became offended at his opposition to sending female nurses. He says the only trouble with the medical corps is that there are not enough surgeons in the army, even in peace; that it is probable that in taking on about 300 contract surgeons, some incompetence may have slipped in, owing to hurried examinations. Of the shortage of medical supplies at Santiago, he says: The principal reason was that the supplies were left behind when the army left Tampa, owing to lack of transportation facilities, and one of the minor reasons was the delay in landing supplies of all kinds at Siboney.

GOVERNOR OTARO of New Mexico, who is visiting Washington, said: "President McKinley's administration is immensely popular with us, and right here I want to say that New Mexico is as loyal and patriotic as any state or territory in the Union. Because many of our people are of Spanish descent, a lot of foolish stuff has been written accusing them of siding with Spain. A greater slander was never perpetrated. Our territory raised five companies of rough riders, three of which did magnificent service in the hard fighting in front of Santiago. The captain of one of them, Max Luna, of Spanish lineage, especially distinguished himself in the charge at San Juan. It was reported that he was killed, but he is very much alive, and it wouldn't be astonishing if his republican friends insisted upon nominating and electing him to congress."

WALLS FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

A Penitentiary Soldier Longs to Be Back to Them Hollow.

Penitentiary Tribune.

City Marshal John Heathman yesterday received the following letter from Douglas Glenn, one of the Penitentiary boys who responded to the second call for volunteers. It is dated Fort Cavite, Philippine islands, July 21, 1898:

We are still in camp and ready to march at a moment's notice. They talk about the fine climate here. They can all have it, but I will take Oregon. I would not give them hollow for the whole island.

The natives of this place are the worst looking human beings any one ever saw—the most inferior, non-descript beings on the face of the earth.

All the animals are small. It can rain more in one day here than in Oregon in one month. We expect the third expedition in a few days, when the bombardment of Manila begins. It will be a hard old fight.

Some of the boys think we will be home December next, but I don't. I hope we will, for I am getting tired living on hardtack and going barefooted. Have not had any shoes for a month.

Well, John, to tell the truth, I would prefer living in the county jail at Penitentiary than to serve my time in the army. It is more creditable to be a jail bird than to be a common private in the army.

T. T. GEER FOR SENATOR.

Interesting Political News Given by Col. James H. Raley.

From Colonel James H. Raley, the East Oregonian learns that T. T. Geer will be a candidate for United States senator against anyone who may come up for consideration during the coming session of the legislature which will be called for October. Although some have wondered if the Waldo Hills statesman would not be a candidate, the statement by Colonel Raley puts an end to the query and establishes it as a fact, since the colonel is recognized as an authority on politics in Oregon. He was seen at his office this morning by an East Oregonian representative and accorded an interview. In answer to several questions asked him, he said:

"In my opinion, there will be a special session of the legislature on about October 3d. In fact, it seems to be generally understood that Governor Lord will call the session for about that time.

"Regarding candidates for the United States senatorship, of course the most absorbing topic at the present time among Oregon politicians, I am of the opinion that T. T. Geer, the governor-elect, will be a formidable candidate against Mr. Corbett, who, I understand, will make an effort to secure the election."

Colonel Raley was importuned to name the composition of the contending forces, so as to give an indication of the respective strength of the two candidates. He smiled and replied:

"No, I cannot say anything of that nature. You may just say that I believe Mr. Geer will be a candidate and develop considerable strength in the legislature."

The announcement thus made will be read with deep interest. It has been all along known that Mr. Corbett would be a candidate, but with Mr. Geer in the field, the situation takes on a problematical complexion, and becomes very much more interesting. Colonel Raley consented to say one thing more. Regarding his opinion as to the outcome, he refused to speak, but he added:

"I will only say that the contest will be warm and bring some powerful influences into play. It will be a fight worth witnessing."

Night Hunters.

W. W. Smead furnishes us with the following details of their successful hunt:

Saturday a bear came into camp while all hands were at dinner. Willard Herren went for the dogs and his gun, at a cabin about a quarter of a mile distant, and returning was joined by Wallace Smead. They at once started out for "bear meat." It took the hounds but a few minutes to strike the hot track, and then the fun began. Overtaking "Mr. Brain" about two miles distant, after a short discussion, up a tree he went. Wallace reaching there in advance, a well-aimed bullet brought a yearling cub to earth, as fat as butter, which was devoured by the campers with a relish. Sunday morning another bear was started in the Willow creek basin. An accidental encounter with a coyote led the dogs astray, and while awaiting their return, to their astonishment an elk stepped out of the brush in an opening 100 yards distant. Smead and Herren brought their arms into action in a jiffy, and a stream of hot lead sent the "pride of the forest" to cover. Two hundred yards away the "monarch" had settled down to a review of the past, when "merciless" Herren was upon him with his death-dealing agent, and it was "all off" with his highness. That night at camp there was a select "sitting-up" party.

Our Advertisers.

Beginning the most promising business season in the history of our county, the business houses of Heppner are resorting to the columns of the Gazette, to impress those who are alive to their own interests and the entire county and community, with the realization that right here can be found goods of every conceivable requirement at prices as close as can be laid down here by any concern in existence. By comparison of local advertisements with the prices catalogued by the many foreign concerns that are flooding our mails you will be brought to the conviction that right here is the place to do your trading, and you will cease being disappointed, and swindled by these "unsight and unseen" methods of foreign catalogue "traffickers."

Big Prize for a Broken Heart.

Not long since a Danville, Ill., jury ordered the male defendant in a breach of promise case to pay the competent sum of $54,333.32 to the afflicted fair one. Though it is a pretty high estimate of blighted affection, there is another estimate which, if not in dollars and cents exactly as high, yet in general consideration of excellence reaches as lofty an altitude. This is the estimate of the people as to the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a remedy for constipation. The action of this gentle but effective laxative is never accompanied by the griping so marked in the operation of most cathartics. It is an incomparable remedy for and preventative of malarial, rheumatic and kidney complaints, and a promoter of appetite and sleep.

A Reward of Merit.

County Superintendent Shipley was the recipient of a beautiful watch chain Saturday evening from the assembled teachers of the institute, as a token of their appreciation of his tireless efforts in contributing to the marked success of the meeting. Prof. Saling made a very neat presentation speech, giving expression to the sentiments of the teachers. Prof. Shipley's appreciation was plainly discernible in the wreath of smiles that bedecked his radiant features.

CUBA'S RICH FORESTS

MAHOGANY IS VERY PLENTIFUL

When Developed, Timber Will Form an Small Export From That Island— Many Kinds of Timber.

Among the many sources of wealth existing in Cuba not the least important is timber. "Cuba," said a prominent lumber merchant, "contains 17,000,000 acres of virgin forest, in which are to be found upwards of forty species of valuable hard woods. The lumber industry, like, indeed, most of the island's resources, has been neglected under Spanish rule. These great forests are practically unexplored. They have certainly never been surveyed by experts, though they will be mines of wealth for the first lumberman who exploits their contents. As for the exports of wood, about $220,000 a year, they represent a small fraction of the possible product. The wood which comes to market in largest quantity from Cuba is cedar, which is wonderfully abundant in Pinar del Rio and the east. But the trade in cedar is badly managed. With bad packing and general shiftlessness, more than half the wood is lost or useless before it reaches this country.

"Other woods which we have been in the habit of getting from Cuba are mahogany and lignum vitae, both very plentiful. The common mahogany of the island is the best there is and sells in this country and Europe at from $110 to $180 per 1000 feet. Another kind called figured or birdseye fetiches from $400 to $600 per 1000 feet. It has been known, indeed, to sell as high as $1,250. The Cuban lignum vitae, the finest known, is much in demand, bringing from $26 to $40 a ton, the extra quality $45. And there are many other woods which would be valuable if only brought to market.

"For example, Cuba contains thirty-two species of palm, including the Yarex palm, whose leaves are used for the manufacture of hats and baskets. The articles so made are exported in considerable quantity to Europe, where they fetch a good price. The fibre, if not so pliable as that of the Panama hats, is more durable. The bark of another palm, the palm real, is used for boards. The boards are very hard and withstand moisture far better than the best yellow pine. The palm real is almost the only material used by the small farmers in building their houses. They employ the bark boards for the walls and the leaves for roofing.

"The Cuban ebony should have a large sale some day. The acacia, of which there are two varieties, is used in the island for rafters. It is very durable and will last for many years even if exposed to wet. The sabina camaruna resembles cedar, but is more solid. It is easily worked. The robe blanco and robe amarillo are also easily worked. They are used for window and door frames, and for carriage and shipbuilding. From its durability the latter is known as eternal wood. The jipi is extremely hard and is especially suitable for posts on account of its durability. The quebra macha has the same qualities. The granadillo is a peculiarly beautiful cabinet wood. The osmitillo is elastic and very strong, and is used for rafters, carriage shafts and barrel hoops. The guama de costa is also strong and elastic, and in addition it is practically waterproof. The yaya, mboa and cuero make good rafters, while the jagan is suitable for gun stocks, and the cuys for posts, particularly under water.

"The jigue has great resisting properties, as has the majana, as well as durability. From the bark of the latter rope can be made as good almost as those of Manila hemp. They need to be used on the island, but they are very dear owing to their being made by hand.

"As proof of the usefulness of the Cuban forest trees it may be said that as a single nail and strong enough to stand up against any wind. The beams and rafters are tied together with several species of liana, which are found in abundance in the woods. Another interesting product of the Cuban forest is the water vine. It grows from two and a half to three inches in diameter, and when cut it yields a large quantity of pure, fresh water. There are also considerable quantities of dye woods, while the supply of opal, resin and turpentine in the forests of Pinar del Rio is simply unlimited.

"The chief difficulty with which the Cuban lumber industry has had to contend with hitherto is lack of transportation facilities. Yet this is a difficulty which should be easily got over for the shape of this island is such that no point is far distant from the coast, while the latter has sheltered inlets every few miles. The transportation of the wood ought to be a very small matter, if you remember that it is considered profitable in the United States to convey lumber many hundreds of miles to the nearest river. But I have no doubt that this will be rectified once the Spaniards are out."

A Sad Death.

The announcement of the death of Charles E. Morgan cast a gloom over the community of Heppner and surrounding country. A young man whose with admirable traits of character had won for him the highest esteem of the entire community to be thus taken away at the very threshold of an active and useful career is indeed a misfortune to the entire community, and we can all unite in extending to the bereaved mother and other members of the family our heartfelt sympathy and appreciation of her loss. He was the eldest son of the widow of Samuel N. Morgan, who prior to his death was recognized as one of the most popular and respected citizens of our county. The young man's death was the result of an accident, an internal injury sustained about a year ago while lifting some heavy timbers. At the time it was given but a passing notice, and at the approach of fall he went to Portland to take a course in the business college when the serious consequences developed. Upon the advice of the most prominent physicians there he returned to his home to await the final terminus of an injury beyond the aid of human skill. The past few months he has spent at the Teal Springs hoping to derive some benefit, but in vain, and as his relatives began to realize the approach of the end, he was taken to his home, where he passed away Saturday at midnight. The remains were brought to town, and an impressive funeral service was held at the home of Mrs. C. Cate, his aunt, by the Rev. Shelly, assisted by Rev. Howard, after which they were interred in the Heppner cemetery.

FROM IONE.

Nat Hale, the Ione business man and all-round hustler, was in town on business yesterday. He reports as follows: Considerable activity awakening as grain hauling increases.

Miss Dela Reed, who went to Kansas City for the summer, has returned, and accepted a clerkship in Joe Woolery's mercantile establishment.

Wm. League and family left Ione on last night's train for Benton county, Mo., where he expects to remain permanently, hoping to better the condition of his wife's health. The town regrets the departure of Mr. League and family, as during his capacity as deputy postmaster he became well and favorably known.

Rev. Beauchamp fortunately recovered his horse and saddle, but all trace of the thief was lost after he disposed of the outfit. The supposition is that he took the train at Douglas. No particular effort seems to have been made to catch him as no warrant was issued for his arrest, which would have placed the responsibility upon either the constable or sheriff. In cases of this kind prompt recourse of the law should be taken advantage of which would result often in the arrest of a fugitive.

His Friend Was Dead.

A rather touching incident occurred at the Unstills House Wednesday morning, says The Dalles Chronicle. A Vancouver Indian, who is said to be 110 years old and stone blind from age, came up on the boat with his daughter yesterday. This morning he was led to the hotel and immediately called for Colonel Sinnott. When told that the colonel was dead, the old man broke into tears and cried like a baby, expressing his sorrow in his simple way and saying: "Colonel Sinnott was a great man," and added that in early days the colonel was a warm friend of his. As there was no one in The Dalles he cared to see, the old, white-haired man was led to the ferry and left for the Yakima reservation.
