It will be an announcement at first causing some surprise, as he has never before conductied himself in a manner to justify any such experience. He has done nothing more nor less than apply for admission to the bar, go before the supreme court of the state of Oregon at Salem, pass the rigid examination imposed on law students, and then be sentenced by the supreme court justices to spend the remainder of his life practicing law.

11 was last Tuesday Senator Morrow stood for the examination, and the supreme court at once declared him entitled to sign himself "J. W. Morrow, attorney at law."

Senator Morrow has been heartily congratulated. He was county clerk of Morrow county, as long as he wanted to be, some five, ten or fifteen years, several consecutive terms, and the experience in that position has been valuable to him while he was pursuing his law studies. He will return to Hoppner as soon as the legislature adjourns, and bang out a painted shingle, as he is now entitled to do. With a keen business insight, long experience and absolutely unquestioned standing, Senator Morrow will achieve success in his new profession.
