WON'T PAY DUTY CALLS.

Revolt of English Women in India Against a Form of Social Bondage.

The English women living in India put a sensible scheme into execution recently. They revolted against the social bondage of "duty calls" and organized an auti-calling union. Sevpledged themselves to abide by the by post. A personal call is allowable only when a special compliment is intended. At home days are held by the members of the union when convenient, notices of these being printed in the papers several days beforehand. The fact that men are excluded from these privileges has caused no end of amusement among the women and no less talk among the lords of creation, particularly the crusty bachelors of society, who declare that calling did keep some women quiet; they go so far as to make wagers on what mischief their women friends will be up to now that there is no necessity for them to pay duty calls.

There is no union of this kind in this city, but the women members of the Barnard club long ago gave up calling for the mere name of the thing. They agreed that their club should be a kind of a social clearing house, and the plan has worked admirably. An informal reception is held in the beautiful club rooms every Saturday afternoon, and a little chat with one's friends there relieves everybody of all calling obligations. This even extends to party calls among most of the members. One of the most prominent women in the club says that the plan not only saves the club members a great deal of valuable time, which can be put to more profitable use but strengthens the moral character as well, since nothing weakens it so much as obligatory duty calling. The membership of this club, which includes men, too, has run away up into the hundreds and the waiting list is very long -N. Y. Sun.

"About two and a half years ago, when I was at Flat Lick, Ky." writes J. W. Jordan, Esq., of Corbin Whitley Co., Ky. "Twas taken with severe poins in the chest, after which I began to spit up blood and was also troubled with ulghtsweats. I was so short winded that I could hardly walk half a mile at once, and if I got the least bit wearied, I would have an attack of phthisic (asthma) and almost die for about two or three days. I concluded to try Dr. R. V. Pierce, and I related my case to him. He wrote me that I should take his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I began to see that it was helping me, so concluded to coutinue its use. I did so and have improved both in strength and in weight. I have not had the phthisic, nor spit up my blood since last spring."
