Governor." The question is still being considered at Washington, as to whether the new army bill makes it necessary to muster the volunteers out and form a new volunteer army, or not. By the terms of enlistment the volunteers can be kept there two years from date of enlistment, bill makes it necessary to reconcile the volunteer army.

There is a difference of opinion in Portland as to what the Oreg n volunteers would do, if mustered out and given the choice of re-enlisting or returning home.

"I don't believe one in ten would re turn," said a military man this morning. For a long time they staid there, wait ing for a fight, and now that it is on, think they want to see it out.

"None of them would object to being this would entitle them to two months' extra pay, and mileage from Son Francisco to Portland. This, of course, they could save. They would not, however, be en titled to mileage from Manila to San Francisco, but simply to transportation and subsistence.

Captain Gadeby, who was with the Oregon volunteers at Manila for some time, takes a different view of the matter "The boys would gladly come home," said he. "I am confident that with but few exceptions, the men would return home if given a chance. "Most of the officers would like to re main, but the boys have been sick of it for a long time.

"They realize that the government is now in need of their services and they are making no complaint. They will stay there and fight until there are none of them left if they are needed. Let them know that there are others to take their places, and you would see the entire regiment coming home.

"These boys can't afford to chase Fili pinos through the jungles for $15 s month, as a business. They didn't enlist for that purpose. It was patriotism that caused them to enlist, and when the war with Spain was over they were morally entitled to come home.

"The present trouble in the Philippines is a part of the machinery work of the government, and should be done by view with the coyotes still after him. men hired for the purpose.

"Why not send some regiments of col ored soldiers over there? They could stand that climate better than our boys, would do excellent work in the Philip chance at once."
