THE PRAIRIE GIRL'S WEDDING

he Seldom Takes a Trip, But Goes Direc to Her New Home.

"As the prairie girl has grown up with her training along practical lines, so she asks only of her lover that he Moreau Barger, of "A Girl's Life on the Prairie," in they May Ladies' Home Journal. "Thousands of seres of land do not make a fortune, and social degrees are practically unknown. The wedding is nearly always at the bride's home. Not once in three score times is it at the church. The near relatives and a few dear friends are the guests. The bride's white wedding gown is simply made. Bunches of goldenrod or roses deck the little parlor or sitting-room, and from the organ comes the wedding march. Seldom does a groomsman or a bride's attendant take part in the ceremony, and more seldom is there a reception afterward. Fortunate indeed are the bride and groom if they can escape a vociferous serenade, for the obsrivari and the bombardment of rice and old shoes are well-established ous toms on the plains. The papers usually add to the story of the marriage: 'After the wedding supper and congratulations the bappy couple drove to their own home, which had already been fitted up for their occupancy."
