NATURE'S LAKE OF SOFT SOAP.
A Curious Formation in the Far North-west Which Lathers at a Touch.

The Great Northern Railway company lately announced a rate of 60 cents per 100 pounds on soap slush from Northern Pacific coast points to Chicago and Mississippi and Missouri river points, says the Seattle Times. Some one has requested a rate on this commodity, but there does not appear to be many people who know what soap slush is. One ingenious gentleman said that it was the product of certain small lakes on the line of the road that are filled with a thick silica water, which, when one's hands are washed in it, gives a lather that would bring joy to the heart of any washerwoman or tonorial artist. When the hair is washed in this wonderful native product the head swells with lather till it takes the proportions of a snow mountain. Sunburn on the face vanishes as mist before the sunshine in the tropics. "There is a lake of this wonderful liquid," said this ingenious informant, "over on the East side. It is a mile long and proportionally broad. Do you know that we are really 'in ignorance' of what we have in this country?"

Local soap people, when asked to define and tell about soap slush, were non-plussed. They have it up. Another party said that not long ago he received a curious product from Walla Walla, a kind of sand mixed with soap substance, from which it was thought soap could be probably made. There is a supply of the washerwomen of the great commons in the New York suburbs.

A last effort to determine the character of soap slush elicited the information that the commodity originated at Portland, probably at the horse meat cannery.

THEY WORSHIP GIN BOTTLES.

Kru Coast Africans Think Them Iced with Divine Attributes.

What is the most remarkable monument ever raised to the advance of civilization in Africa? asks the New York Journal.

A well-known African explorer, Joseph Thomson, thought it was a mighty pyramid of gin bottles. He saw a great gathering of Kru coast negroes engaged in worshipping this strange altar. So strange was this incident that many people would refuse to believe it. Mr. Thomson, therefore, took a photograph of the scene and brought it home to the Royal Geographical society in London.

The Kru are the finest of West African races. They are, in fact, about the only people in that part of the world who will do any work. European commerce is practically dependent on them. To these noble savages gin is the spirit of the white man's civilization in more senses than one. It represents his power, his philanthropy and his religion. As soon as they tasted gin they fell down and worshipped it. The more they tasted the more they fell down. After awhile they fell down so much that the European governments thought it might be a good thing to restrict the circulation of gin. The most remarkable fact of all is that the contents of the gin bottles were imbibed by one man, a native, whose overpowering thirst for the white man's spirits eventually drove him mad. So the bottles stand a monument to the monumental drinker of darkest Africa.

HIGH BUILDINGS.

One Was Planned by a Student Thirty Years Ago.

An old graduate of the Troy Polytechnic institute was looking at the high Neave building a few days ago, reports the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, and said:

"That high building makes me think of a graduate of my class who was a native. We thought he was crazy, and his mysterious end only deepens the conviction that our surmise was correct. He was everlastingly speculating upon the seemingly improbable. At one time he said that the day would come when they would build houses 100 stories high, and to show how it would be done he made a drawing of a bridge, as we called it, standing on end. Then he said all you have to do to finish the thing is to cut stones to fill the spaces, rest in the joints and rafters, and there you are. And that was more than 30 years ago, before the high buildings had been thought of by any architect. And the plans of the present are practically the same as proposed by Fay when he was but a boy. He graduated, and was looked upon as the brightest man of the class, though everyone thought him peculiar. He went to the west—Colorado, I think—and disappeared as mysteriously as if he had gone to another planet. I think he was never heard of—at least I have never heard of him from that day to this. Surely genius and madness are near allied."

A Progressive Railroad.

The Bio Grande Western Railway, other wise known as "The Great Salt Lake Route," is and has been, since the opening of "The Ogden Gateway," the popular trans-continental route between the Pacific northwest and the east. To add to its popularity, arrangements have been made to make its train service and equipment superior to any of its competitors. Already the running time of its several express trains has been cut down so that passengers from Portland reach Chicago in less than five days. Effective May 1st a perfect dining car service will be established. This will make the trip via Salt Lake City the ideal one. To further add to the comfort of its patrons, handsome excursion tourist cars are being built for the run between Portland and Chicago. With the dining car service established and the new tourist cars running, there will be little to be added to make a perfect train.

KEEPING A HUSBAND.

Tact and Patience of the Wife Will Keep Married Love From Waning.

"Every married woman, unless she has been so unfortunate as to marry a brute, holds her happiness under God in her own hands, and the keepers of it are love and patience," says Mrs. Moses P. Handy in "A Talk With Young Wives" in Women's Home Companion. "Never reason with an angry man," said this astute sage. It does no good under any circumstances, and when the man in your husband it is worse than folly. What will it profit you, even though you have the best of the argument? Therefore, in everything, unless it be a matter of conscience, it is generally better to yield than to contend. Not that the wife should be slavishly submissive; no man can respect a woman who is lacking in self respect, and every married woman has her rights. But the best way in which to secure these rights is not aggressive battle for them. Let them be taken as a matter of course, asking for granted that your husband's first wish is always for your comfort, as yours always is for his. Never forget that your interests are, or ought to be, identical, and try to convince him that his wife is his best friend and safest confidant. To that end never repeat anything which he tells you of his own or other people's affairs; and if he makes disparaging remarks of anyone, keep the knowledge strictly to yourself. Even the law cannot compel a woman to bear testimony against her husband; she is a fool if she does so voluntarily. Let it be your chief object to please your husband, and count nothing too much trouble to this end. It seems almost an insult to urge neatness of person upon any self-respecting woman, yet there are many wives who come short in this respect, who fall into the grievous error of thinking that John doesn't matter. John does matter more than anyone else, and it is many times more important that you should look well in his eyes than in those of all the rest of the world. The task of keeping a husband to the full as difficult as the winning of him, and is far more necessary.
