Minor & Co have commenced a series of special sales opening with cloaks and jackets this week, placing fascinators and hoods on the list. Next week a new line will be cut. The ladies will watch M. & Co's ads with interest from now on and save money.
There is a genuine revival on at the M. E. church, south. Souls are being saved nightly. Great crowds attend and the interest is unabated. Adjutant Nelson and wife are certainly a whole host. The Adjutant is a plain old fashioned gospel preacher. He is absolutely fearless, and he smashes the toes of sinner and saint alike, but it is all done with such a loving heart, that no one can take offense. They will at least remain over Sunday. The street meeting is attracting much attention.
Report comes from Lexington that a disgraceful row occurred there last Friday night, owing to attentions being paid to an estimable young lady by a traveling professional man, which excited the ire of some local young men. Sympathy seemed divided.
J. E. Halton, the artistic painter is now at work on a picturesque pastoral scene, to be bordered with advertisement of our principal business houses, which will be placed in the Palace hotel office. His work is original and effective and will be studied with interest by those who see it. We are inclined to encourage this disposition of advertising as it keeps our business houses constantly before the public. American advertising instinct has placed us far in the lead of all nations.
