While Great British feeds contentedly upon long cables showing American friendship, the Boer agents in Europe believe sentiment in the United States has been gradually turning Boerward, into material effect. Under this impression the Associated Press learns they are contemplating dispatching a special mission to the United States for the purpose of influencing public opinion, possibly by open meetings and by personally whom they believe friendly. Moreover, they declare has been a systematic campaigo of John Hays Hammond, the American engineer, who was a member of the Johannesburg reform committee, to influence Washington opinion.
