

Why Women Cannot Sleep

The highly organized, finely-tuned nervous system of women subjects them to nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate. The peace of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which is necessary for happy womanhood, is only possible when the sensitive feminine organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any weakness or derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restores womanly health, nervous vigor and capability as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription" invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y. It purifies, heals and strengthens; insures functional regularity; provides physical reinforcement and sustaining power at periods of special weakness and depression.

It is the only medicine which makes the coming of baby safe and comparatively easy. In a personal letter to Dr. Pierce, Mrs. Marguerite Collin, of Cutler, Alaska Co., Ont., says:

"I was a sufferer and was cured by Dr. Pierce's wonderful medicine. When I commenced the medicine I could neither eat nor sleep. My hands and feet were constantly cold. I had a wasting, troublesome drain for three months and my monthly periods were never regular. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it cured me. I feel well. I thank the World's Dispensary Medical Association."

FUTURE FORECASTS.

A Well-Known Railroad Man Tackles a Fortune-Teller.

Everybody knows Billy Mead, the railroad magnate and managing editor of the Northwestern. When he was in Heppner this week he had the usual number of good stories to tell, one of which was something like this:

"Portland is a progressive place, and now has its modern fakes like cities in the east. I recently called on one of its fair fortune tellers, and she looked into the far future for me. She said:

"I see you looking in your private palace car as president and board of directors of the Siberian, Saskatchewan, Astoria, St. Petersburg and elsewhere railroad, smoking a cigar that has never been used before. Your personal profits on the road are $5 a minute and you are giving your salary to the porter."

"I knew she was lying, for she had her eyes closed when she said she was seeing all this. But I let her go on, and started a brisk conversation with her as follows:

"Does this horoscope which you are using this season give you any idea as to whether money matters will be scarce with me next week or otherwise, and if so what I had better do about it?"

"Toward the last of the week you will experience considerable monetary prostration, but just as you have become despondent, at the very tail end of the week, the horizon will clear up and a slight, dark gentleman, with wide trousers, who is a total stranger to you, will loan you quite a sum of money, with the understanding that it is to be repaid on Monday."

"Then you would not advise me to ally my spring fever by making a trip to Yaguna Bay?"

"Certainly not."

"Would it be etiquette in dancing a quadrille to swing a young person of the opposite sex twice around at a select party when you are but slightly acquainted, but feel quite confident that her partner is unclaimed?"

"Yes."

"Does your horoscope tell a person what to do with woolen mills that are so slow about materializing?"

"No, not at the present prices."

"So you predict an early marriage, with threatening weather and strong

THE PRICE OF WOOL.

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, published at Boston Feb. 8, says:

All the developments of the situation seem to favor the view adopted by some weeks ago that the height of the movement in wool quotations has been reached, and that the market is henceforth far more likely to display a falling, rather than a rising, tendency. The supposition of a fall in prices was inevitable then the last series of London sales opened. The facts in connection with those sales were generally being minimized, but there can be no doubt that the situation was viewed by every one in interest as critical. Indeed, it is not too much to say that the situation was hardly short of panic for a time. Nobody appeared to anticipate a decline from the December quotations, and when the January sales opened 75 per cent of there was a scramble to withdraw wool from the catalogue. The withdrawal of a very heavy quantity caused a shooting tendency, though there was actually no quotable improvement. The selling of the decline was all that was accomplished. The trade in London has striven very hard to keep their courage up, and are now claiming that the position of the market will right itself in time, but it is easy to perceive that they are not so sure of the future as they strive to appear. It looks very much to us as if the check received in the wool market at the January sales in London was analogous to that received by the stock market in this country last April. That was believed by nearly everybody at the time to be merely temporary, but, as a matter of fact, it was the initiation of a drop in price which went on quite steadily to the end of the year, and which may not yet have come to an end. We may be mistaken in supposing that the wool was seen by its best prices, but we must confess that to all outward appearances the market acts as if it was now facing the inevitable reaction from a period of over-speculation.

We have already hinted at what might have occurred had not nearly 60,000 bales of wool been withheld from the January London sales. This wool now goes over to the March sales, when, it is estimated, there will be total offerings of 200,000 bales. This compares with 179,000 bales in March, 1909, and is, on the whole, a heavy total, when we take into account the larger purchases of wool by consumers direct in Australia this season. But if a net total available supply in London of 144,000 bales in January precipitated a break of 75 per cent in fine wool, what are likely to be the consequences of an offering of 200,000 bales in March? In short, it is not probable that the inevitable was stayed off in January only to be realized later on? The significance of the January sales will best appear if we tabulate the results, which we do by the aid of figures received this week:

Spring Styles.

The entire absence of winter this winter has caused Easter to threaten to come on ahead of time, and spring styles in female fashions are already arriving. Sad to say, many sweet little birds have been slaughtered to ornament spring hats, but this year that may be avoided, and still the new spring style in bonnets is just too sweet for anything. It is made out of some kind of raff, sort of a delicate texture and of a rather lightish color, kind of cantaway on the side and rolled back on top, and scooped out underneath, and trimmed with some sort of ribbon stuff that looks nice, and some kind of other material that is handsome, and is all fixed on that kind of way which looks so much like something you can't remember, and the whole is very exquisite, reminding you of a most beautiful something or other whose name you can't just at present call to mind.

McCleure's Magazine.

The February McCleure's opens with a second installment of "The Life of the Master" by the Rev. John Watson (Jan Maclaren), illustrated with four of Mr. Linson's brilliant paintings, reproduced in the colors of the originals, and a number of beautiful drawings in black and white. In both text and illustrations, the work increases in interest and more and more decisively sets a new standard in magazine publication. The fiction of the number includes a story of mining life, a yachting and love story of the Georgia coast, a story of English prison life, and a railroad story—all original in incident and interestingly illustrated.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimony of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept aside to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without present relief, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Holsleben and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I get a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by Conser & Warren.

COYOTE SKINS.

Persons who are employed in killing coyotes for the bounty on the scalps will be pleased to learn that at the recent fair sales in London the coyote and wild cat skins brought considerably higher prices than usual. When a man can get a good price for the skin of the coyote, it is bound to make trouble for the coyotes, and if the price for skins and scalps keeps up, the coyote will be exterminated. Everything is supposed to play some useful part in the economy of nature, but just where the coyote comes in as useful no one has ever discovered. In the matter of keeping down the jack rabbits and rattlesnakes, the coyote may be entitled to a few credit marks, but his depredations among the lambs and poultry of settlers cause them to forget this.
