WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Mar. 18.—Congress has seen occupied with important questions that have excluded all other subjects. These are the financial bill and the Puerto Rica measure, the last one of the most interesting subjects of the present time. It seems that this favored isle had more gently treated by Spain than any other of her insular dominions. Since the American occupation it has been raveged by storm and no market for her products. Its people are suffering great hardships and the determination is to offer them good terms, as to make their lots as comfortable as we can. Representative Tongue is one of the busiest men in Congress. When I saw him last he had two type-writers at work and tells me that it requires that many experts to do his correspondedce. He lets no business go unanswered, but all letters are replied to immediately. The work of a congressman is drudgery—if he attends to the wants of his constitution.

he attends to the wants of his constituents. There are no more hard working men in this city than the Oregon delegation.

Membership of important committees commands friendship from many who desire to pass measures pending. The success of a congressman redounds to the advantage of his constituents: Our congressmen occupy good positions and Oregon is favored. No new man can fill such positions until he has earned them. The man who has realized success, has the best chance for greater success in the future.

But the bill in which Senator McBride is most interested in in the interest.

but the bill in which Senator McBride is most interested is in the interest of pioneer seldiers of Oregon and Washington. After working bard to get an early report on this bill, Mr. McBride made an effort to take the bill out of its place on the calendar, and pass it by nonnimous consent. A half dozen more Senators seem to want to amend the bill so as to take in seldiers of later legical. so as to take in soldiers of later Invian Wars, and finally it had to be laid aside for regular order. Since that time the Senator explained the bill, so that when it came up not a single objection was made and it passed. Senstor McBride is highly gratified over this result and has called on the speaker of the house to induce him to favor the bill. Representatives Tongue and Moody are already doing active work for the bill, and will urge early action by the committee of Pensions.

Pensions.

The passage of eight of Senator Me-Bride's bills during 30 days evidence his industry and influence in the Senate. Other proof, if any were needed, of his high standing among Republican leaders, is found in his recent appointment on the Executive Committee of the Republican Congressional Committee leaders, is found in his recent appointment on the Executive Committee of the Republican Congressional Committee of the which consists of one member of congress from each state. On this Executive Committee of nine members, there are but three Senators, Procter of Vermont, formerly Secretary of War, and Gallinoar merly Secretary of War, and Gallinoar on all rairoad lines running into the Ride of Oregon. To be one of three Republican Congressional Committee of the will be the establishment of the rollow ing rules:

in congress.

Republican Senators could give no Republican Senators could give no stronger evidence of their confidence in Senator McBride than by placing him on this important committee. It shows that Republican Senators consider Mr. McBride worthy of the highest trusts for will be kept till pronounced healthy.

The fact that Ladysmith received its name in memory of a wom un is well knows, but the romance of General Sir Harry Smith's marriage bas not been captured by an English force, were sur inclosed by a fence. prised by a visit from two very young and beautiful Spanish girls of the better class. These fair callers begged protection in the alarming circumstances in which they had been placed by the oc-cupation of the rougher soldiery. Their request was, of course, gallantly granted, and in a short time one of the officere, Ceptain Smith, found himself desper-ately in love. In due time be married narriage proved a happy one.
