PRACTICAL PROSPERITY.

Among the first to be benefited by the good times that followed Bryan's defeat four years ago were the stockgrowers of Eastern and Western Oregon, says The Oregonian. Immediately there arose a demand for all kinds of stock, which has continued to this day, with an ever-upward tendency in prices.

After discharging the debts that had accumulated in the two years that Bryan was preaching 16 to 1, they began importing the finest breeds of cattle, horses, sheep and swine. The result is that today the stock industry is on a firmer foundation than ever before, and growers are out of debt and prosperous.

Entire communities in Eastern Oregon are largely dependent upon stock, and if the industry should decline, they would experience the same depression they had a few years ago. Umatilla county alone receives from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 a year from stock, wool and wheat.

MCKINLEY A MAN.

In the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference yesterday, the committee on temperance presented a report which condemned the army canteen, and urged enforcement of prohibitory measures.

"I believe," he said, "that the President wants to do what is right. He is one of the best, one of the purest and one of the bravest men I ever knew."

The bishop's remarks provoked great applause, but some of the members took exception. The bishop replied that he was a man before he was a bishop, and will cease to be a bishop before he will cease to be a man.

JUST SO.

In one of his recent campaign speeches Gov. Roosevelt said:

"Remember the conditions of Coxy armies and the free soup-houses of six years ago. Think how the prophecies made by our opponents four years ago have been falsified by events. Look around at your own prosperity. There is twice as much employment as there was four years ago. And with all this in mind you cannot but realize that it is for your material interest to keep unchanged the policies of President McKinley and that it would be folly, unworthy of a serious people, to trust yourselves to the exploded fallacies of our antagonist."

THOSE TRUSTS.

The evident purpose of the democratic party in this campaign is to make trusts the paramount issue. The platform adopted by the national convention placed the opposition to expansion in the lead, but the utterances of Bryan and the local orators have all been directed against the trusts, says the Argonaut.

It may be admitted that the trusts are responsible for certain abuses that have harmed every community to which their operations extended. In certain cases they have increased the prices that consumers have to pay for commodities; in other cases they have crushed the small dealer and forced him out of the business.

The cry of the Democrats against the trusts is insincere; their purpose is simply to gain political capital by appealing to greed and prejudice rather than reason. The incincerity of the outcry is most clearly demonstrated when the arguments of their speakers are analyzed. Trusts whose homes are in the East have sustained their attacks. But the trusts we have at home are apparently harmless, for they are either ignored or sustained in the addresses of the Democratic speakers.

The wine companies of California have formed a trust whose avowed purpose is to increase the price. Nobody has heard a word of protest against the exactions of this monopoly. The raisin-growers have formed a trust that has raised the price of raisins. The fruit-canners have formed a combine that may be called a trust. The fish-canneries are members of a trust. These organizations, which are simply combines of the larger producers in certain local branches of industry, have formed trusts, but they foster certain industries that are local, and therefore they are praised and sustained rather than abused.

Twenty years ago when General Hancock was a candidate for the presidency, a cartoon was published representing him sitting in a chair, with a most puzzled expression on his face. Underneath was the legend, "Who is Tariff, and why is he for revenue only?" The cartoon was inspired by Hancock's remark that the tariff was a local issue only. The tariff is, and the trust is. The Democrats favor the local trust, and denounce the trust whose home is in another state.

POLITIX.

A railroad man who has had acres of experience, says:

Now, when it comes to politics, don't you think a man ought to try to show just as good sense in voting as he does in his trade or business? Bryan is long on wind, we can all agree on that; but Mack has got engineer's license. He's been over the road. Bryan claims he has an entirely new method, a method of his own, for running the government steam boiler. He is very anxious to try his new method—and if she bursts, she can burst. Mack maintains, though, that you can't toy with a steam engine. 'Twon't do to let the water get low; and you have got to shovel something besides air into the fire-box.

In 1896 Mr. Bryan said—That just as sure as Mack got into the cab the boiler would explode, the road would become foreclosed at auction, the right of way given over to foreign nations and the inhabitants of the territory along the route would become paupers.

Well, the old engine is still doing business, although four years have passed away. They have lengthened out her boiler some and hitched on several new coaches. The eagle still sits on the cow-catcher and has both eyes peeled for obstructions. There was a foreign critter got on the track once, but the eagle screeched and Mack, he turned on extra steam. They did not hold a post-mortem because the foreigner was so cut up and scattered they couldn't find the remains. Because of the fact that the foreigner, however, did undertake to cross the track, there have been several important branches added to the road.

ROOSEVELT'S REMARKS.

Gov. Roosevelt has concluded his campaign tour in Illinois. At Alton his train was stopped for orders. An incident of interest occurred at that point. It was the arrival and stopping of Mr. Bryan's special train, north-bound, immediately alongside the Roosevelt special. The Bryan train had also stopped for orders. The candidates did not see each other until their cars were passing slowly, but as they passed they recognized each other in the dim light from the car windows, and each leaning forward waved his hat in salutation.

At Springfield, speaking of Abraham Lincoln, Mr. Roosevelt said: "He sacrificed himself in death that his people should know not only liberty, but the Union that symbolized order as well. Fundamentally, every great question can be settled by following his advice. Lincoln came into prominence by his great debate with Douglas, when they were opposed to one another, but when the honor of the flag was at stake Douglas turned and shook the hands of his great rival. So have we a right to appeal to the Democrats today to put imperialism above partisanship."

The Argonaut still holds its place as one of the best literary papers on earth, and it should be in every household. Its contents cover a wide range of subjects, all timely.

APPLES.

Morrow county orchards are producing an abundance of apples this year. The supply is away ahead of the demand for home use, and there is no money in shipping them away. So a great many of them go to the hog.

It is a matter of national record that the biggest and best apple exhibited at the World's Fair was raised near Lexington, Morrow county.

The apple is a favorite fruit, and 210,000,000 barrels are produced annually in the United States. Of these 3,000,000 barrels are sold to England alone. Iowa produces enough to supply England's demand. Every winter from 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 barrels are held in cold storage. New York, Iowa, Oregon, Washington, California, Colorado, Missouri and Kansas are the apple states.

Once, after exposing the ridiculous blunders of the editor of certain old plays, James Russell Lowell concluded with the remark, "In point of fact, we must apply to this gentleman the name of the first King of Sparta." No one remembered, of course, what this was, but when they looked it up they found it was Endamidas.

WEATHER.

One of the heaviest showers of the season descended on the Heppner Hills Tuesday night.

At present perfect autumn weather prevails and good grass is assured on the ranges, and fall grain will get a fine start.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I would surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by Conser & Warren.
