The great carnivals are at midsummer and Christmas, and the former acquires a character all its own from the fact that the club betakes itself to the redwoods and camps out for a few days in a body. There at midnight in the mighty forest occur the solemn ceremonies attending the cremation of Care. There the High Priest and his acolytes form their melancholy procession to the sound of chanting, and with flaring torches the great funeral pyre is set alight and the gigantic body of the tyrant is consumed. It is only after Care is dead and turned to ashes that the "High Jinks" fairly begins; but it moves fast when it is well started.

DE WET'S JOKE.

Not long ago three British scouts were taken prisoners by General De Wet, the Boer, near Lindley. De Wet, who does not care to be burdened with prisoners, told these three men that he had an important dispatch for Gen. Rundle, and if they would personally undertake to deliver it to the general he would give them back their liberty.

They were elated at the proposal and all gave De Wet their word of honor to deliver the missive into Gen. Rundle's own hands. On reaching Rundle's headquarters they insisted on handing the letter to the general personally, and on his opening it-the three still standing as his audience—he read aloud the contents as follows: "Dear Sir: Please chain up these three devils, as I can catch them every day. Yours, De Wet."

is the Editor-in-chief, and Hamilton W. Mabie the Associate Editor. JACOB A. RIIS RALPH CONNOR

The author of "How the Other Half Lives" will give in The Outlook an intensely human and vivid account of his experiences as a child in Denmark, an immigrant in America, a workman, a traveller, a reporter, and finally a student of tenement house problems, and an efficient aid to Theodore Roosevelt in reorganizing the New York police. Mr. Rils writes with simplicity, humor and vigor.

Under this pseudonym were written two of the most striking of recent novels, "Black Rock" and "The Sky Pilot." A new novel of Canadian and Western life by this author will appear in Tus Outnook during the year. In spirit, humor, pathos and strong character-drawing it is even superior to its predecessors.

LYMAN ABBOTT will contibute a series of important papers on funda-mental political principles as applied to twentieth century problems. It will be called "THE RIGHTS or Man," and will define industrial, educational and religious, as well as political, rights and duties.
