What has become of the commercial club?

Now is the time to make a grand clean up of the city for the winter.

The people are becoming alarmed over the condition of King Edward. He is suffering from cancer of the throat and serious developments are expected.

The career of the miserable assassin Czolgosz was ended in the electric chair Tuesday. Hated and despised this venomous fiend has paid for his awful crime with his worthless life.

The third year of the war in South Africa has begun and still the Boers are not subdued. English soldiers outnumber the Boers more than ten to one, but dispatches state that England will call out more troops for South Africa. It is wonderful how the Boers can hold out against such odds.

At present, eastern Oregon has no representation at Salem, in any office large or small, and fully one third of the people of the state live in eastern Oregon. Eastern Oregon people pay their share of taxes, but have no representation in state government. Why should this unfair condition continue? The Pendleton E. O. truthfully states the condition of affairs in the above. This unfair condition should not exist.

H. W. Corbett, chairman of the subscription committee of the Lewis and Clark Centennial has a call in the Oregonian urging a meeting of the different committees to take the necessary steps for opening subscriptions. The fact that the Buffalo exposition is a failure from a financial standpoint seems to have no effect upon the enthusiasm of the incorporators of the Lewis and Clark Centennial. The people of Portland and the state of Oregon can make this centennial a success if they will work for it.

The American people should feel well at ease with such a man as President Roosevelt at the helm. He will write his own message to congress on entirely original lines. Formerly that portion of the message conveying foreign relations was written by the secretary of state, and other cabinet officers each has contributed a chapter on his respective department. This will be done away with by President Roosevelt. He only touches that which he particularly desires to lay before congress. This original and important document will be looked to with much interest by the American people.

Secretary Long's naval estimates for the next fiscal year amount to $88,910,684. The naval appropriation for the current fiscal year was about $78,000,000. The estimates for next year are, consequently, nearly $11,000,000 in excess of this year. Ten years ago our total naval appropriation was $13,225,000. In "Notes on Naval Progress," published recently by the Bureau of Naval Intelligence, the chief foreign naval budgets for the current fiscal year are given as follows: Great Britain, $149,555,000; France, $63,245,658; Russia, $50,005,297; Germany, $46,822,782; Italy, $23,703,595; and Japan $18,557,653. The naval expenses of the United States are thus second only to those of Great Britain and they are fast approaching it, although the naval tonnage of the latter power, which is estimated at 1,768,855, is more than two-thirds greater than ours. The American navy promises ultimately to be the most easily afloat.

Republican leaders in congress are opposed to tariff revision at the coming session. While a great many republicans are in favor of a reduction of the tariff upon the high protected trust-made articles which are sold cheaper abroad than at home, it looks like the various arguments made by republican leaders against tariff revision will prevail. The argument of Hoskins, of Illinois, carries considerable weight in the following: "Tariff revision and further reduction of the internal revenue should not be undertaken at the coming session of congress. If we are to build the isthmian canal, and it seems to me that legislation to authorize such a canal is assured this winter, there will be use for many millions of dollars of government money. Then, if we pass a river and harbor bill at the approaching session, it will call for many millions more. These two measures can be counted on to absorb all the surplus which may accumulate in the treasury from the present rate of taxation."

American methods have forced the locomotive builders of Glasgow, Scotland, to approve the action of the Viceroy of India in arranging a conference of Indian railroad engineers to consider the adoption of a standard for locomotives. The American locomotive is built on a well-defined standard, and it may be duplicated in all or any of its parts at short notice. The same principle is in operation in the construction of clocks, watches, bridges and many descriptions of machinery. The system has added immensely to the economy of manufacture, something which the English manufacturer was slow in recognizing and has delayed imitating to his cost. The American locomotive has found its way abroad in fields where the English manufacturer thought he had a monopoly, and, to his surprise, he has been underbid, just as the English bridge-builders were underbid in the matter of cost and time in the Atbara bridge contract, and for the same reason. It is likely now that the English locomotive builders, and the railway companies which have been constructing their own rolling stock, will break away from their old-time traditions and adopt American methods under the stimulus of American competition.

Considerable weight in the following: "Tariff revision and further reduction of the internal revenue should not be undertaken at the coming session of congress. If we are to build the isthmian canal, and it seems to me that legislation to authorize such a canal is assured this winter, there will be use for many millions of dollars of government money. Then, if we pass a river and harbor bill at the approaching session, it will call for many millions more. These two measures can be counted on to absorb all the surplus which may accumulate in the treasury from the present rate of taxation."

A statement prepared by Director Roberts of the mint showing the production of the world's gold and silver for the year 1900, furnishes some interesting figures: "It shows that the production of gold in the world that year was 12,457,287 ounces of the value of $257,513,700, a loss in value of $49,970,200 from 1899. The loss was mainly in the Transvaal field and due to the war. The production of South Africa in 1899 was of the value of $73,277,100, and in 1900, $9,671,000. The principal gains were $1,118,000 in the United States and $6,600,000 in Canada. The United States gain heads the list. In the United States the principal gains were by Alaska, Arizona, Colorado and Utah. The silver output of the world amounted to 178,736,796 fine ounces, the largest ever known. It exceeds the product of 1899 by 11,572,513 ounces. The United States again leads all other producers, with a slight excess over Mexico. There was an important advance in the price of silver during the year, the price ranging from 59.1 cents per ounce in January, to 66.1 cents in the last month of the year. The chief factor in the rise was the purchases for the account of the government of India." In the United States, Colorado leads both in the production of gold and silver.

A good way to help yourself is to help the community in which you live by patronizing its industries, institutions and enterprises, thus keeping the money you spend near enough to give you a chance to trade back for it tomorrow.—Ex. Distinctly American. The assassin of President McKinley, Leon Czolgosz, on Tuesday paid the penalty of his diabolical crime. The event will but momentarily engage the attention of the American people. It will simply become more and the final transaction in the fulfillment of the law of the country, and if the victim of execution were the murderer of a private citizen, would supply only a minor item in the news columns of the daily papers the following morning. Such expressions of approval as the execution calls forth will be quietly and dignifiedly made and there will be no evidence that the event awakens more than passing interest. It will well illustrate one great characteristic of the American people—their mental equilibrium. Of all civilized peoples, Americans are less given to undue excitement over events of this kind; they were not when Booth was shot, nor when Garfield was hanged, and will not be when the electric current is shot through Czolgosz's body. In this characteristic the American people stand out in strong contrast to the French, who when the assassin of Carroll met his fate, indulged in a holiday, and to the Austrians, who, when Lombini, the assassin of Empress Elizabeth, was punished, engaged in riotous demonstrations, and still again the Italians, who, when Bressi committed suicide, deplored his end because the murder of King Humbert had not been properly avenged. The fact is, the American mental equilibrium is due in a very large measure to confidence in the executive of law made by the people themselves through their representatives in legislative bodies, which is itself a condition not obtaining in European countries, not even in so-called republican France, to the extent that it should. Again it is due to the higher degree of intelligence developed under American institutions, a degree impossible under any but the utmost limit of free government consistent with safety to the rights, property and lives of citizens.

Engineers are raising a bonus for a w'olen mill. It is said that locators have become so thick in Malheur county that the county recorder is obliged to insist that the applicants form in line and take their turn when they come to file their applications. Very little land remains to be taken up as oil land, all that is available having been taken.

Literary Notes

The Thanksgiving number of the Ladies' Home Journal is replete with good fiction and interesting and novel features. It opens appropriately with an article which tells "Where the President's Turkey Comes From." Then there are delightful stories by Hazelkirk, Butterworth and Laura Spencer Postler, and a new love story called "Christine," by Frederick M. Smith. Cleve and Moffatt has an interesting story about Ira D. Sankey, the great evangelist, and Edith King swain recounts the famous ascents she has made in various parts of the world. Will Brady's original designs for a house begin with the breakfast room, and Wilson Eye, Jr., presents plans for a country house and a garden. Mr. Bok gives much good advice to young married couples in his editorial. Another most timely feature is "Why Should a Young Man Support the Church?" by the Rev. Francis E. Clark. Many home-made Christmas gifts are shown, and the first of "The Journal's Amazing Puzzles" appear. The regular departments are exceptionally good and the illustrations superb. By the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year (ten cents a copy).

McClure, Phillips & Co. announce for publication about Nov. 1st a second volume of Edwin Markham's poems. This will be the first collection of the poet's verse since the appearance of "The Man With the Hoe and Other Poems," and it will test the lasting power of his genius. Consistent among the contents will be "Lincoln, the Great Commander," which gives the book its title; "The Muse of Labor"; "The Sower" and "The Angelus," the last two being inspired, as was "The Man With the Hoe," by Millet's paintings.

The Chaco river, known the railroad bridge is alive with silverside salmon, which rise readily to a spoon. Fishing is not permitted above the bridge, which is two miles below the government dock. The Chaco salmon hatchery has taken nearly all the Chinook salmon eggs it can handle.

VALUE OF MAN'S LIFE. The supreme courts have decided that the life of the average man is worth just what he is able to earn. A man's worth depends to a great extent upon his health, and it is always worth the power to improve his condition. The secret to the measure of health and strength. Every man may be bright, active and happy if his digestion is normal. If it is not, Hostetter's Stomach Bites will make it so. It regulates the digestive organs in relation to properly digested and assimilated food. Try it for constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles. It has cured as much ailments for the past fifty years, and today there is nothing just as good.

A Fossil man who was helping drive a band of horses through to Arlington the other day rode into Springfield and Roger's barn to feed his horse at noon and when he pulled the saddle off, his watch fell to the floor, says the Fossil Journal. He had lost the watch at Fossil that morning. An imprint on the horse's back showed that the watch had laid under the saddle blanket all forenoon. The time piece was still running, but the crystal was broken. The owner supposes it dropped from his pocket and landed on the saddle blanket when he saddled his horse that morning, and thus got into its strange position.
