HAVANA STREET CARS.

The Natives Derive Much Pleasure from Riding on the New Electric Railway.

One of the principal features of the Americanizing of Havana has been the introduction of electric cars. There were formerly about six miles of track in the capital, but the equipment, consisting of little, bob-tailed cars and scrawny, under-sized mules, did not continue to make a service worthy of enthusiastic mention. When the track was lengthened out to 24 miles and Wizard Edison's big electric flyers put on, all of Havana's 250,000 inhabitants wanted to ride at once. One of the peculiarities of the service is the tendency of the motormen to run ahead of the schedule. They tear through the narrow, crooked streets at a rate that is exceedingly dangerous. The frequency of fatalities does not seem to have the desired effect. These yellow fellows are strangers to the automatic brake. They have been so accustomed to driving steeds that have to be urged by the constant application to whip and spur that they seem to have no fear of one that will run away. As a consequence, the Havana street cars put the island express trains to shame.

THE SOLITAIRE HABIT.

According to This Testimony It Is One to Be Avoided by Married Men.

"Take my advice," said a married man to a friend who is engaged, "and never contract the solitaire habit. It is fatal to domestic happiness. You seem surprised, but it is the truth. Apparently nothing could be so innocent and harmless as sitting in one's own home, with a pack of cards playing solitaire. But the habit grows on one so," says the Philadelphia Record. "The victim eventually finds that he is losing his will power. He becomes an unsociable fiend. He cannot concentrate his mind on anything else. He loses his taste for reading and conversation bores him. His wife cannot get him to go out with her, and she regards him as a disagreeable old bear. He may make up his mind to leave the cards alone, but his will is gone. He is restless and irritable, like a toper without his drink. I know what I'm talking about, because I'm a slave to the habit. That's why I warn you."

Study of the Great Lakes.

The biological survey of the great lakes, which has been in progress several years, is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. Half a dozen scientists are spending much of their time in careful study of the various forms of animal life in which the waters of the great lakes abound.

STEAL GEMS FROM ALTAR.

Seven of the Precious Stones in Crypt of New York Cathedral Removed by Thieves.

Seven of the precious stones in the altar of the Tiffany chapel, in the crypt of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Cathedral heights, N. Y., were removed by thieves. After midnight the thieves, presumably two in number, gained access to the grounds from the entrance on One Hundred and Thirteenth street, opposite St. Luke's hospital. They then broke a window in the crypt and had an easy approach to the altar.

The altar is of Carrara marble, faced with glass mosaics. The symbols of the four evangelists are done in mother of pearl and a central monogram is treated with gold, garnets, precious stones and mother of pearl inlaid. Just above, at the rear of the altar, is a small tabernacle inlaid with colored marble and gems. Back of the altar, against the wall, is the reredos, of polished black marble, inlaid with mosaics.

That the thieves were familiar with the nature of the altar is evident, for they selected the most valuable jewels. The night watchman, it is supposed, was at the other end of his beat, which extends from One Hundred and Tenth to One Hundred and Thirteenth street, between Amsterdam and Morningside avenues. Caretakers were sleeping in a little wooden hut close to the crypt. It is believed the thieves are the same who attempted to rob the crypt two weeks ago, when decorations of the altar, including the cross and two vases, were disturbed, but the robbers evidently were frightened away on that occasion.

SUPPOSED CORPSE FLEES.

Man Found Frozen Stiff Escapes from Morgue and Is Found at Home Eating Hot Dinner.

Found frozen in a snowdrift and apparently dead, after the recent storm at New York, William Ferry, a farmer, near Anthony, N. J., lay for ten hours on the cooling board of an undertaker's shop, surrounded by coffins and paraphernalia of death. But for the absence of the undertaker, he might have been buried alive.

Ferry was found lying in the snow. The body was cold, and the supposed corpse was taken to an undertaking establishment. Half a dozen neighbors gathered to watch over the body. The absence of the undertaker prevented further action. When he arrived the party gathered in another room. Upon their return to the cooling room they were horrified to find the supposed corpse missing. "Body snatchers" was their first thought. An alarm was sent out and a messenger hurried to Ferry's home. When he arrived Ferry was disposing of a hearty meal. He said he suddenly became conscious, and observing his surroundings, fled through a side door and hurried home.

ONLY INSECTS TO BLAME.

Decided by Congress at Havana That Mosquito Is the Spreader of Yellow Fever.

"The Mosquito and Its Relation to Yellow Fever" was the subject of discussion before the sanitary congress at Havana. Maj. W. C. Gorgas, chief sanitary officer of Havana; Maj. Havard, chief surgeon of the medical department in Cuba, and Drs. Finlay and Ross read papers on the subject. The congress adopted a resolution setting forth that the stygomyia fasciata mosquito is the only means of the transmission of yellow fever yet discovered, and that the prophylaxis to be adopted should be directed toward the destruction of this mosquito, or, where this is not possible, toward the isolation of the people from it.

The congress was attended by representatives from the United States, Mexico, Costa Rica, Uruguay, Paraguay, Nicaragua, Colombia, Santo Domingo, Argentina and Cuba.

To Make Study of Cancer.

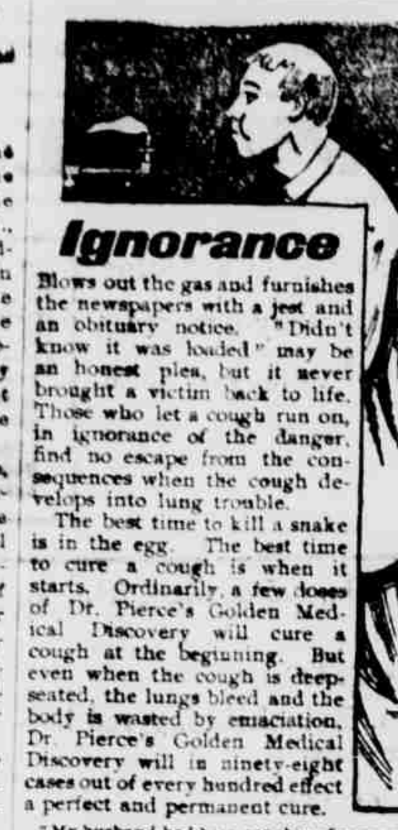
The official heads of the medical profession of Great Britain are determined to unite for a systematic investigation into the causes, the prevention and the treatment of cancer, according to the London correspondent of the New York Herald. The king has given countenance to the movement, and it is likely interesting developments will follow shortly. The councils of the Royal College of Surgeons and the Royal College of Physicians have adopted a joint resolution empowering delegates to draw up a detailed scheme of work. Sir William Church, Sir William Broadbent and others equally well known are on the committee.

An Odd Scandal.

A scandal has arisen over the reburial of Robert Hammerling, the German poet, who died in 1889. He was moved into a permanent tomb in the cemetery at Graz, when the coffin was opened and the medical men present, among whom were two university professors, surreptitiously and without authority removed the head in order to measure the skull. Since then the skull has ben kept in the anatomical laboratory at Graz university. Hammerling's relatives and friends are indignant, and demand that the poet's head shall be put back with the body at once.

Orbit of a Large Fire Ball.

On the 4th of December, 1901, about 7:36 p. m. a fire ball of exceptional brilliancy was observed in England. It gave a flash of dazzling intensity, illuminating the English channel and the south of England with a light stronger than that of the full moon. The fire ball had a bluish green head and it left a train or streak of orange-red material. The position of the meteor was observed by many persons and its orbit has been computed by Mr. W. F. Denning. With the aid of a map a good idea of its course can be had from the following figures: Height at beginning, 91 miles over English channel, 11 miles south of Bridport, Dorset. Height at ending, 50 miles over English channel, 15 miles south of Needles, Isle of Wight. Length of path, 64 miles. Approximate velocity, 21 miles per second. Point in which its path prolonged would reach the earth, 27 miles south of Brighton. Height of streak, 72 to 55 miles, and its length, 26 miles.



Ignorance

Blows out the gas and furnishes the newspapers with a jest and an obituary notice. "Didn't know it was loaded" may be an honest plea, but it never brought a victim back to life. Those who let a cough run on, in ignorance of the danger, find no escape from the consequences when the cough develops into lung trouble.

The best time to kill a snake is in the egg. The best time to cure a cough is when it starts. Ordinarily, a few doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a cough at the beginning. But even when the cough is deep-seated, the lungs bleed and the body is wasted by emaciation, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred effect a perfect and permanent cure.

"My husband had been coughing for years and people frankly told me that he would go into consumption," writes Mrs. John Shireman, of No. 508 18th Place, Chicago, Ill. "He had such terrible coughing spells we not only grew much alarmed but looked for the bursting of a blood-vessel or a hemorrhage at most any time. After three days' coughing he was too weak to cross the room. The doctor did him no good. I stated the case to a druggist, who handed me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. My husband's recovery was remarkable. In three days after he began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery he was up and around, and in two more days he went to work. Two bottles cured him."

IN SEARCH OF A MOTIVE.

Justice Could Not Be Meted Out Until the Difficult Problem Was Solved.

There were seven men seated in a circle and an eighth standing up with a rope around his neck when the colonel rode up, relates an exchange. As he drew rein the leader of the seven arose and said:

"Glad to see you, stranger. Perhaps you'd like to assist in this necktie party?"

"Are you going to hang that man?" asked the colonel.

"For sure."

"What's he done?"

"Stole that cayuse over thar. Yep, we'll hang him when we git around to it. We've been discussin' the thing for the last two hours."

"But what's the discussion?"

"As to his motive in stealin' the cayuse. I contend that no man does anything without a motive, but just what that cuss' motive was he won't tell, and we can't figger out. Mebbe you kin help us a bit."

"Why," replied the colonel, "I should say that his motive in stealing the cayuse was to have a horse to ride."

"By John, but listen to that!" exclaimed the man as he turned to his companions. "That was his motive, of course, and we've fooled away a good two hours over it. Yes, he wanted a hoss to ride, of course, and now, as thar is no other bizness before the meetin', we'll purceed to pull the rope and execute jestice."

CHASTISED THE BULLY.

Slab-Sided Capt. Hunker Took All the Badness Out of the Terror of the Ship.

The officer commanding the naval station at Newport, Capt. J. J. Hunker, is long, slab-sided and lanky, and his chest looks caved in, but he is the strongest man in the navy and can whip his weight in wildcats, says an exchange. In a wardroom mess with Hunker once was one of the worst bullies who ever disgraced the American navy. He was six feet tall, a Hercules in build, and could put a longboat on his back and pack it ashore. For the first week that he joined the ship he made it hot for everybody on her. On the seventh day, when breakfast was over and he got up to go out of the wardroom, Hunker asked him to sit down again. He requested all the other officers of the mess to go on deck and stay there till he sent for them. They could see in his eye what he intended to do, and it was a pity; he was thin as a rail and stoop-shouldered—bent as if with a cough. But they went out and left him with the giant. Ten minutes later Hunker invited them in again. The bully looked as if he had been through a meat chopper. He went to bed and stayed there for three weeks. To this day he is an angel of grace and courtesy.

Livery for Motor Drivers.

The king is setting an example of smartness by having his new motor car painted exactly like the royal carriages, with the royal coat-of-arms on each door and two liveried servants on the box seat. Other motor car owners are no longer content to have a driver dressed in dark blue with a peaked cap. Lord and Lady de Grey and Lord and Lady Gosford have put their drivers into ordinary livery, while a number of well-known people are giving their coachmen lessons in motor driving.—London Mail.
