FOR THE BLUE MOUNTAINS

Indians on Their Way for Summer Recreation.

Numerous roaming bands of Indians with their cayuses heavily packed with their goods and chattels, are passing through the city almost daily on their way from the Columbia river country to the Blue mountains for summer residence.

The few swashes that are left, the remnants of a once powerful race, still hold to their original characteristics, but in general show considerable degeneration, and if possible are a little dirtier and more shiftless, however, they are still gentlemen of leisure, and the squaws bear the burden of labor and providing for the family.

The clutchmen pack the ponies, carry the loads, and in fact the whole responsibility. It is not an uncommon sight to see a squaw with a load that would sway the back of a mule, while her noble husband leads the way to camp without anything to rest upon his broad shoulders, but they are all happy.

What the future may bring does not trouble the Indian. If they do not have enough to eat, they go without and are satisfied. When they travel, all of their property tied upon the back of a cayuse, with the attendant cares, go with them. In the summer time they spend their time in breathing the pure air, drinking the good water and enjoying the comforts of the Blue mountains, where game is plentiful.

It would be labor to build a house, so the sky is their roof and the most convenient camping place their abode. In the winter time they go to the more congenial climate along the Columbia.

The Indians harvest in the pulled wool industry will soon be here. Among the thousands of sheep that are driven to the mountains for summer range, some are killed by coyotes and others die from natural causes. The carcass of a dead sheep is just what the swashes are looking for. It may furnish a tender steak, and if the wool is left on it is sure to be a profitable find.

They will inhabit the mountains until the fall season.

CAMPAIGN OPENS

Judge Caples Will Fire the First Gun Saturday Evening.

THE PLACE TO SAVE MONEY

Views of a Farmer

Urges Support of the Republican Ticket.

Eight Mile, Ore., April 29, 1902.

EMOR GAZETTE: The conservative voter, whether he be Republican or Democratic in his political leaning, aims to keep so far loose from party leading strings as to have his influence directed in the interest of good government. The old motto, "the greatest good of the greatest number" is prominently before his eye and he aims to cast his vote in that direction.

Such being his admitted intention, and crediting him with honest purpose, he only needs to have pointed out to him those through whom these ends can be best served, and he should fall in line at once.

While detracting nothing from any individual, it is an undoubted privilege to praise any, as well. The merits of any person or any official are best known by their acts and some of their opinions as are made the property of the public. This being the case, it is no breach of either faith or friendship, no imputation against any, when the conservative voter is urged and advised to cast his ballot for the Republican candidates for both state and county offices. More especially will the conservative voter serve his own interests and carry out his own views by supporting the Republican candidates for county offices. Several of them have served the county officially. That they served faithfully and satisfactorily is proven by their re-nomination. The able and honest manner in which they have performed their official duties, without showing favoritism for any, but with an evident intent to treat all alike and in a just and economical manner, gives them a just claim for the votes of all the conservative element most of all. Such men, whose acts are already public property are Vaxter Crawford, W. L. Sasing and Mat Identithal. Of the others the most important office is that of sheriff. The candidate for this office, E. M. Shurt, is a man well qualified for the position in every way. His opinions upon good government have been voiced through the public press and have become thereby the property of the public, so that it is known how he stands upon that important point. He has the education needed for the official position of the duties of the office, and the moral courage to enforce the laws without fear or favor. Such a man cannot be other than a good officer as well as a good citizen. For this reason he is amply worthy to receive and should receive them. The other candidates are men who were chosen for their known ability and integrity and will not disappoint those who support them.

Taken altogether the county ticket is composed of some of the best men in the county. No one, be he conservative

Poor Richard Says:

"The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise."

We have often heard it said in defence of poor printing that it attracts attention.

Attracting attention is only a part of its mission.

Printing that will do you good should attract favorable attention.

There are some things which are better overlooked.

The kind of commercial printing which a great many merchants are willing to use belong to this class.

You want your printing to attract attention not by its defects but through its merits.

It should be so good, so perfectly suited to its purpose that it will attract attention only through the clean, clear and satisfactory way in which it delivers its message.

This applies just as much to the printing you put upon the head of your letters, statements and things of that kind as it does to the printing used in a pamphlet, booklet, folder, circular or card.

Whatever is printed is printed to be read.

The best printing is none too good for your purpose if your business depends upon the opinion of other people.

If you wish to practice what this sermon preaches, let us see you at our office.

The Mayflower Mine

Don B. Stauffer informs us that he has now mining area which will get away for the Mayflower mine. Along about the first week of May, Stauffer who recently returned from Portland, is highly pleased and very enthusiastic over the prospect. He has secured one that he took with him from the Mayflower mine. This ore is said to be 80 per cent free metal and some of the richer veins show up as high as $100 to the ton. The shaft is now already being run out and is expected to pay more than double the cost invested in it. As soon as the shafts get good enough, to haul the ore to the surface, the company will put a five stamp mill and mill race, and will vigorously work it. As soon as Mr. Stauffer gets to the mine a number of men will be put on. It is expected that Mr. Stauffer who is an expert miner and thoroughly conversant with all the facts that the Mayflower mine will be a valuable property in the near future. This summer's development work and mining in much ore, the prospect will be put under heavy expenses, and it is desired to help defray this cost as a few hundred shares will be put on the market before Mr. Stauffer gets away. This will be the last chance to get Mayflower mining shares at a low price per share, for as soon as the mine is put in the stock will get a rise.
