IONE ITEMS.

IONE, May 21, 1902.

Mrs. Mary E. Hale and son, Fred and Clay, left Ione yesterday for Oregon City where they expect to make their future home. The people of Ione will greatly miss the presence of "Grandma Hale," as she was familiarly called.

The democrats of Ione are very active in their efforts to elect Chamberlain, and have chartered a special train to take those who want to see and hear him when in Heppner the 24th. They show more enthusiasm now than they probably will after election day.

Contractors Nilsson and Carle are having stone hauled to be used in the construction of the addition to the Ione school.

B. P. Taylor of Stayton, Oregon, paid Ione a business visit last week.

Several of our citizens went to Heppner Monday to serve as jurors in the circuit court, among them being Mat Halvorsen and Paul Balsager.

Cheney, the well-driller, is negotiating with several parties who are contemplating drilling for water.

Young Weatherford is still dancing vile serving out 25-day jail sentence. This is the proper thing to do with the young hoodlums or older ones who misbehave themselves. It ought to and no doubt will be a wholesome lesson to the unruly element who have so long disgraced the city by their presence. Another young stiff was told to leave town within 24 hours or take the consequences, and not liking the prospects of having to serve time, went within the appointed time.

Lots of inquiry lately about land for sale.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

The electric light towers of Aerostyl, Ill., constructed in 1893, and the first one—construction of that type, have been taken down.

In a recent number of a German gazette, the statement appeared that at a test made in London an American coal had yielded 15,000 cubic feet of gas per ton.

During the past year not a single case of smallpox has occurred among the staff of the London smallpox hospital, indicating that careful vaccination is an absolute safeguard against that disease.

John B. Clark expresses his belief in the Atlantic Monthly that a hundred years hence Manhattan island will have streets in several stories, and that rifles, cannons, warships and the wasterful burning of coal to make steam will be things of the past.

Prof. Louis Agassiz, many years ago, first announced that the ice sheet of glacial flow at the northwest of Maine could not have been less than a mile deep, while later geologists have confirmed his statement, adding the more recent conclusion that the ice was of that thickness at least over the larger part of New England.

The Boston Journal of Medical Research reports that an examination of 405 human cadavers, made by Prof. H. A. Williams, revealed the presence of trichinae in 27 cases, but all these persons had died of other diseases than trichinosis, though the infection must in some instances have occurred a considerable time previously.

"The railway system of Argentina," says a correspondent of the London Post, "is second to none in the world. Trains run at frequent intervals and punctually. The rolling stock is excellent, and a long distance journey by rail is a luxury. The sleeping cars are sumptuously appointed, the permanent ways are well laid and there is consequently very little jostling. It is possible to dine in the trains as comfortably as in a hotel. The dining cars are well fitted up and beautifully decorated with flowers and pot plants."

HE PROVED HIS WORTH.

Young Man Showed the Old Man That He Was the Right Sort for a Sea-in-Law.

"A young man of somewhat exuberant disposition," said an old gentleman of high standing in the community the other day, related the Chicago Chronicle, "had been hanging around my girl for some time and I saw that unless something was done before long he would soon become a member of the family. I had frowned upon the matter right from the start, as I didn't think he was good enough for my daughter. But from the beginning I simply constituted a hopeless minority, as my wife thought he was a perfect paragon. I thought I knew better and when one Sunday I saw him at a ball game I was sure of it.

"I am a great lover of the American game and Sunday is the only day that I have time to attend. I have always been very careful to keep from my wife the fact that I ever attended a game of ball on Sunday, as she is a very strict church member and views with horror anyone who seeks pleasure on the Sabbath. So when I saw the young man at the game I thought I had found a way to bring her over to my side, knowing full well that if I did his chances of becoming a member of the family were mighty slim. I hadn't the slightest idea that he had seen me there and I thought I could startle an admission from him that would show him up in his true colors and without danger to myself. So when he called the other night I said suddenly:

"Young man, where were you last Sunday?"

"Oh, I just sat two rows ahead of you," he answered, easily.

"That threw explanations back on me and left me gasping for breath. "Fine sermon, wasn't it?" he added a moment later, coming to my rescue like the trump he is.

"Oh, you dear fellow, did you go to church and say nothing to me about it, cried my wife. "How lovely! What was the text?"

"It was simply incapable of answering and again that young man filled the breach.

"Ninety and nine," said he. "The score wasn't quite as bad as that—almost, though. Say, he's the finest young man that ever drew breath and he can have anything that belongs to me."

AN AUTHOR'S MISHAP.

His Work of Inspiration Performed Under Disadvantage Goes Up in Curling Smoke.

While camping in the Adirondacks last summer, Fannie W. Harr, author of "The Abecedarians Affair," in Lapine's Magazine, had an inspiration regarding a unique short story, but found himself apparently helpless to utilize the fleeting thought. The camp was ten miles from civilization and while creature comforts were abundant, the supply of paper was limited to burnt paper, and the only literary tool in the outfit. But where there's a will there's a way. The happy thought came to strip off sheets of bark from the graceful birch tree (even as another Hawaiian) and utilize this romantic material. This was done, and all went well for a number of moonlit hours and moment minutes, snatched from sleep. The story grew until the pile of scribbled bark sheets upon the mantel shelf was as thick as a ponderosa dictionary. Another pile of virgin sheets lay beside, all ready for the fast writing stub of a pencil. Returning late at night from a day's fishing a greasy log fire in the hearth checked the sportman. But what's that? The bark scrolls gone and only the virgin heap remaining? "Make fire," explained the French-Canadian guide. "Bark good make fire, an' only use dirty piece." And his manner and explanation were both so open and sincere that no man could have his heart to cavil.
