MUST NOT LOOK NEW.

Dress Suit Cases and Hat Boxes Damaged Before Sold.

Smart Young Travelers Dislike the Attention Attracted by New Appearance—Novel Demand of Trunk Trade.

That characteristic of youth which make persons shrink from ridicule as they would from a burning brand has been pointed out many a time, says the Chicago Tribune. A man went into a leather store recently where trunks, dress-suit cases and top-hat boxes were for sale. The proprietor of the store said, when he asked for a suit case:

"Would you like a brand new one, or one whose appearance is somewhat worn? Both are equally good. The difference is simply a matter of personal choice."

"Why should anyone wanting a new dress-suit case be satisfied with one whose leather bears marks of wear?" said the would-be purchaser.

"We keep two kinds," replied the dealer, "for the simple reason that they are demanded by the trade. When this particular form of grip first came into fashion only the brand new ones were sold. To offer or expect anyone to purchase a soiled and battered case would seem as absurd as to imagine a person buying a pair of stubbed boots.

"One day a stylishly dressed young man came in and said he wanted a dress-suit case. We showed him various kinds, but he was not satisfied. At last he said: 'These are good cases, I know, but what I want is one that doesn't look so shiny new.' He explained that it was no light task to carry a brand new dress-suit case through a crowded street, into a thronged railroad station, and then lift it, in all its glossiness, through a well-filled car. 'Everybody rubbers at you and the case,' he said, 'and you feel like a farmer.' At last we succeeded in fixing up a new case so that it looked like an old one, and he departed happy. That put an idea into our heads, and ever since we have always kept a stock of apparently secondhand grips on hand for the satisfaction of our customers who are sensitive about ridicule. And, do you know, they sell remarkably well.

"But, bless you, the dress-suit case isn't a marker to the top-hat case. Where we sell one disfigured dress-suit case we sell three for top hats. Now, the reason for this difference is the same that made the damaged cases popular. We sell more grips than we do hat cases, leaving out of consideration entirely those purchased by women, who constitute one of our best sources of trade. There is something unusually personal about a top hat. No young man ever assumed it without a thrill of self consciousness. It is no easy matter for him to emerge thus attired for the first time on the public thoroughfare. One feels that the whole wide world is focusing its eyes directly on the top of one's head. Is it not true? Well, then you may understand how that same young fellow may feel when he transports for the first few times a new, glowing hat case, with brass lock shining like a polished mirror in the sun. So we are ready to supply him with one that looks as if it had been through long months of service both at home and abroad, yet is really as new as any on our shelves. I have heard of young men kicking the cases, or dragging them through the mud, hitting them against picket fences, leaving them out in rain to get off that 'new' look which is so distressing.

"But here is an interesting little commentary on a much discussed controversy. Women do not care. The newer the suit case the better they like it. If, as some say, they possess vanity, it does not show itself along those lines."

POOR ENGLISH NOBLEMEN.

Many of the Titled Gentry Who Are Unable to Attend the Coronation of the King.

It must be borne in mind that the peerage of England are not, cumulatively speaking, a wealthy body. A goodly throng of them are extremely poor men. All over Great Britain and Ireland are scattered earls, viscounts, barons, who will feel themselves "summoned" to the coronation, who pride themselves on "dating back" either to William the Conqueror or the still more ancient Saxon kings, and yet whose incomes are in some cases even less than $5,000 or $6,000 a year. This is the pathetic side of the grand national demonstration, says Woman's Home Companion. We Americans think of it as a gathering of commingled birth and wealth. But in reality it will be nothing of the sort. It will be a pomp and splendor masking in the main much ardent and pitiful struggle. Heart-burnings innumerable will smoulder unseen during the enactment of this demonstration. The smart set and the landed noblemen who choose rarely to come up to town, yet who own lordly halls in the country, with troops of servants and well-filled stables—these will treat the whole glittering manifestation with an easy attitude of deference. But these will be a mere comparative handful, and hosts of their equal in "birth" and rank will suffer torments of the most pinching economy to achieve what they carelessly and jauntily carry off.

History Corrected.

A lecturer on the mistakes of history says that Ethan Allen did not utter at the taking of Fort Ticonderoga the ringing phrase associated with that event in the mind of every schoolboy. Instead of informing the British commander that he demanded the surrender of the stronghold "in the name of the great Jehovah and the continental congress," he shouted: "Come out of that, you old rat!"

Not Such a Bad Joke.

Friends played a grim joke on Rev. R. G. Roscamp, of Kokomo, Ind., three years ago, the seriousness of which is just now appreciated. He was on a trip to Denver, when an acquaintance, in a spirit of banter, gave him a block of supposedly worthless mining stock. He lately sold the stock for $500,000.

The editorial page of the Weekly Oregonian gives a broad treatment to a wide range of subjects.

Dr. Pierce's GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY Restores LOST FLESH AND STRENGTH

"I was a total wreck—could not sleep or eat," writes Mr. J. C. Beers, of Berryman, Crawford Co., Mo. "For two years I tried medicine from doctors but received very little benefit. I lost flesh and strength, was not able to do a good day's work. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and when I had taken one bottle I could sleep and my appetite was wonderfully improved. I have taken five bottles and am still improving."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore, accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."
