B. P. Bleakman, of Hardman was in the city Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts from Iowa, are visiting their son Frank Roberts.

WANTED.—Girl to do general housework in small family. Inquire of Mrs. Phil Cohn.

The GAZETTE has just received a fine assortment of ladies' visiting cards in the very latest styles.

Attention is called to the elegant Sunday dinner to be served at the Palace Read bill of fare.

LOST.—Between Heppner and Ione, two heavy halters. Finder will leave same at this office and receive reward.

Alfred Holman, associate editor of the Oregonian, came up from Portland, Saturday evening for the purpose of making a personal visit to the Morrow county coal fields. Mr. Holman drove out to the mines Sunday, and returned to Portland, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Saling were pleasantly surprised at their home in this city, yesterday evening by the Heppner Symphony Band and a party of young people. At about eight o'clock the young folks gathered and a little later the band boys gave them the second surprise by playing a beautiful selection at the gate. After playing a couple of selections they were invited in, when more music and a delicate lunch followed. In a short speech by Vawter Crawford, a fine clock was presented by the young folks to Mr. and Mrs. Saling as a wedding present.

Eczema

How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales!
 Some people call it tetter, milk crust or salt rheum.

The suffering from it is sometimes intense; local applications are resorted to—they mitigate, but cannot cure.

It proceeds from humors inherited or acquired and persists until these have been removed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

positively removes them, has radically and permanently cured the worst cases, and is without an equal for all cutaneous eruptions.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic. Price 25 cents.

TRIP TO COAL MINES

NOTES PICKED UP ON WAY TO BLUE MOUNTAINS.

Where Miners are Located Would Make an Ideal Summer Resort --Pleasant Surroundings.

There are certain pleasant features of a trip from Heppner to the Morrow county coal fields that leave recollections that are lasting.

In company with Mrs. D. A. Herren, A. J. Hicks, editor of the Heppner Times, and Frank Parker, a GAZETTE representative started Friday of last week going as far as Mr. Herren's place the first evening.

From Heppner out to D. A. Herren's fine country home, there is a very good road up Balm fork. Everything at this season is very dry. The many alfalfa fields present a withered appearance, but this is caused by grasshoppers, for they have already paid all of the hay fields a visit and have cleaned up the second crop leaving only the dry stubs.

The first night we were entertained at the splendid country home of D. A. Herren. Mr. Herren has everything arranged for comfort. In front of the house there is a pond of rippling water on which there are domestic ducks and geese giving the place an animated appearance for these aquatic fowls are always busy.

Mr. Herren has a good water supply which is piped into his house and over the place for irrigation purposes, and the productive land with plenty of water furnishes an immense amount of fruits and vegetables.

Here we had the pleasure of talking with Grandma Herren, Mr. Herren's mother, a venerable old pioneer of 1845, who loves to talk of early days, and the winning of this great state from the wilderness.

The grand old pioneers, we all respect and love them.

From Mr. Herren's place an early start was made from the mines. Until you reach the timber line, after a couple of miles travel you have seen practically, the scenery of Morrow county until you get to the mountains proper.

Along the roadside, long, low and narrow ricks of alfalfa and rye, indicate the principal vocation in this portion of the county, that of stockraising.

After passing one hill, another looms up, all yellow and streaked with brown with the dark rim rock for a little contrast, one after the other until the timber line is reached when there is a change as if by magic.

The present route to the mines passes directly through the great stock ranch of the Penland Livestock company.

This company owns 20,000 acres of deeded land, and the blooded cattle and sheep on this ranch run into the thousands.

At about 16 miles from Heppner, scattering and scrubby pines mark the timber line, and a good view of the western spur of the Blue mountains creates the impression that these mountains have been named correctly, for the outline in the distance is always a deep indigo hue.

The first good timber on the road to the mines is where the thoroughfare passes through the mountain ranch of Robert Watkins. Here is a belt of good timber.

Above Mr. Watkins' place are the placer slings of Phil Metschan, Jr., and Thos. L. Brophy. In this vicinity, numerous prospect holes are in sight of the road, where miners have been searching for the precious yellow metal.

Farther up the mountain there is an immense growth of black pine from two to eight inches in diameter and so thick as to be almost impenetrable. Under the shade of this thick growth is a beautiful carpet of bright green pine grass, where occasionally a chattering pine squirrel is disturbed from his lair or the whirr of a timber pheasant or blue grouse reminds the traveler of the absence of civilization.

Dotted here and there in the fertile ravines are homes with surroundings that are pleasant. Fields and gardens are cultivated which show the great productiveness of Morrow county soil.

Standing around the baysheds, lazily switching the flies are fat and sleek cattle and horses, showing the fruits of a profitable industry.

In these homes, I am told that pianos are to be found and luxuries that many town residents cannot afford.

After traveling in the timber for some distance, in plain sight of the road, is the old Jumbo quartz mine which has long since been abandoned.

Above the old Jumbo mine, belts of long and slender tamarack skirt the road side. This is excellent tie and post timber and will some day be valuable.

When on the crest of the hill just before making the descent into the Willow creek basin, there is a decided change in the surface formation. The road grading shows sandstone and clay which is in evidence all the way down the mountain.

For the entire distance from this city there is a gradual climb to the mines. From the elevation of 2000 feet at Heppner you go up and up until the aneroid shows an elevation of 5000 feet at the upper mines.

At the mines the conditions are grand for a summer resort. From every spring and creek the water is clear and icy cold, and the atmosphere is exhilarating.

The miners have comfortable quarters and they are a jolly whole souled lot of men.

D. A. Herren has general supervision over the mining property.

W. D. Sprunt is foreman of the mining work.

While rambling over the mountains Mr. Herren called attention to a stalk of wheat that was growing by the side of a trail. Near the wheat was a stalk of rye almost seven feet high. The head of wheat was well formed and the kernels were plump and well matured, growing at an altitude of 4700 feet above the sea level. The seed had probably been dropped by some packer.
