Facts to Be Learned by American Players from English Cousins-Consideration for Caddies

American players, or some of them, might well learn something from the games, and a participant in the practice rounds, states that there was a marked the Englishmen in their bearing toward the caddies. The Americans, especially the college boys, were impatient if the the drive. The Englishmen did not hurry or worry at all. They almost invariably said "Thank you" when the caddie did a service for which he was being paid. They consulted with the caddle and usually accepted his judgment as of And they did not run. One of the caddies was sent up the hill at Myopia to indicate the direction of the hole. He started to clubs, after a sharp command from one of the college boys.

"Don't run, my lad," called out the Englishman for whom he was doing the service, "we've got all the time that there
