Stories of "Golden Rule" Jones.

The late Mayor Samuel M. Jones, of Toledo, won his sobriquet, "Golden Rule" following his election as Mayor of Toledo. The church-going classes and the laboring element voted for him, and he proceeded to apply to the conduct of public business as far as possible the Golden Rule principle which had distinguished his private life.

His family physician met him in the Boody house in Toledo last spring and warned him that his health would not permit him entering another campaign.

"Why!" shouted Jones, "I am physically, intellectually and spiritually better than I ever was before in my life. One of you hold my hat as high as my head."

A traveling man took the hat and Mayor Jones proceeded to kick a hole in it and then offered to stand on his head

Mayor Jones was born in Wales 58 years ago, and came to this country with his parents when he was three years old. He disliked his father's business of farming. He learned the machinist's trade, and joined the rush to the Pennsylvania oil regions in 1864, where he made a fortune. He settled in Lima, Ohio, where he invested in a factory for the manufacture of oil well supplies. Seven hundred men applied for the 13 jobs he had to give out in his little factory. This insight into the appalling conditions that surrounded the lot of the workingman overwhelmed him. Thereafter he took unto himself the rule of doing by others as he would wish to be done by.

He applied his conviction that eight hours a day is sufficient for a man to work, gave his men maximum wages and a week's vacation every year, made them a present of from 5 to 10 per cent of the entire amount of yearly profits, and took their families out for lake rides.

He established Golden Rule Park, where good music and good speaking are provided the year around. He once said: "We cannot come nearer to a just system of production and distribution than by adopting the creed of St. Simon: 'From each according to his ability; to each according to his needs'."

Twenty-three carloads of hogs, aggregating 2300 head, were shipped from Garfield, Wash., to Seattle, Thursday.

In swimming Rogue river, 20 miles below Grant's Pass, Thursday, to get a deer he had just shot on the opposite side of the river, Canner Johnson was drowned.

"My hair was falling out badly and I was afraid I would lose it all. Then I used Ayer's Hair Vigor. It quickly stopped the falling and made my hair all I could wish it to be."
