A BIG WHEAT CROP.

Morrow County Far Ahead of Previous Records.

The wheat crop of Morrow county is now all threshed and the bulk of the grain has been hauled to market.

While this year's crop cannot go on record as showing the largest yield, still in the aggregate the crop is much larger than ever before. This is owing to largely increased acreage in all of the wheat growing districts.

From the best information obtainable from warehousemen and farmers, Morrow county's wheat crop this year will reach a total of 1,400,000 bushels. The yield being estimated at 15 bushels to the acre, would indicate that there were 93,333 acres in wheat this year.

It is estimated that 1,300,000 bushels will be exported, 100,000 bushels being required for home consumption. The bulk of the amount kept at home being used for seed.

Such a wheat crop represents a vast amount of wealth to be distributed among a small number of people. The population of this county is little less than 5,000, and as the population of the towns will easily reach 2000, and quite a number outside of the towns are not farmers, being engaged in the stock business, it would seem that somebody is making money.

Most of the crop has already been sold at prices ranging in the neighborhood of 70 cents per bushel. It would be safe to say that the wheat exported will bring Morrow county farmers over $900,000.

While the stock industry is still a prominent factor and represents a large amount of wealth, it is now in the background when compared with wheat which heads the list in the production of wealth.

For the nine months of this year ending November 1, railroad figures show that there have been shipped from Morrow county 2,500 head of cattle, 1,800 head of hogs, 100,000 head of sheep, and 3,000,000 pounds of wool. Sheep and wool have brought a good price, but with all this the wheat stands out with a good third more value than all the wealth produced by stock.

At the principal warehouses along the Heppner branch of the O. R. & N., all of the warehouses have been crowded and it has been necessary to pile a large amount of wheat on the ground outside of the buildings.

Farmers are now seeding and another large crop will be put in this fall.

CLOSE TO 43,000.

Republicans won in Oregon by 42,896 Votes.

Official returns from every county except Curry show the Republican plurality in the last election to be 42,896, and the total vote in the state 90,268. This is the largest plurality the Republican ticket ever received and the heaviest vote ever cast in a Presidential election in Oregon except 1896, when the money question brought out a total vote 95,441. That the vote of 1904 was so large is due chiefly to the prohibition issue, which threw into the campaign a local interest that could not be aroused by discussion of National subjects.

One of the noteworthy features of the returns is the evidence of the rapid growth of socialism, the vote of the Socialist party having grown from 1494 in 1900, to 5763 in 1902, and 7615 in 1904.

Compared with the vote of four years ago, the returns show a Republican gain of 14,000 votes, and a Democratic loss of 16,000. Comparisons can scarcely be made with the vote of 1896, for in that year the opposition to the Republican party was represented by a fusion organization in which the strength of the Democratic party could not be very accurately estimated.

The influence of the prohibition question in bringing out the voters in this election is shown by a comparison of votes in counties where the prohibition question was submitted, with the vote in counties where no prohibition fight had been raised. Thus, Polk County, which had no vote on prohibition this year, fell off 110 in its total vote, while Marion, an adjoining county, in which the prohibition question was presented, experienced a gain of 189 votes in the total.

Josephine County, whose voters were not asked to pass upon the merits of the prohibition question, fell off 260 in its total vote, while Jackson, adjoining, made a slight gain in the number of votes cast, the prohibition issue serving to overcome the apathy which otherwise characterized the campaign. Even the warm fight under the provisions of the local option law did not bring out enough votes to make the total vote as great as in the state election last June, when 93,906 votes were cast for Congressman and 93,608 for Supreme Judge.

In 23 counties in which there was a vote on prohibition, there were cast 29,245 votes for and 42,902 against, showing a majority of 13,657 against prohibition. Prohibition carried in six counties, two in the Willamette Valley, Benton and Yamhill, one in Eastern Oregon, Gilliam, and three on the coast, Tillamook, Coos and Curry.
