

RE LOVE MAY BE

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]
The trend of the shore lay hard and black and ragged in the moonlight. Long, even swells lifted the yacht like a cork on their giant bosoms, poised her there for a moment and then went sliding landward. Far away on a tiny black dot of an island a sleepy little lighthouse blinked with lazy regularity, now white, now red.

In the cabin the piano tinkled merrily, and snatches of ragtime and excerpts from the latest musical farces were greeted with much laughter and noisy applause.

There was not even a catspaw of wind. The yacht lay becalmed, riding over the swells like a great white sea bird with folded wings.

In two chairs near the wheel sat a man and a girl. The girl was dressed in white. Her face was hard and set. Her eyes were fixed on the distant point where the breaking waves outlined the shore in frothing white. The man's eyes were regarding the girl gravely. His mouth was set tightly—so tightly that harsh lines appeared and gave his usual careless, jovial face a new and a far less attractive expression. But presently the harsh lines relaxed somewhat, and the man smiled—a rather artificial smile and fraught with much cynicism. He leaned toward the girl.

"At least," he said slowly, "I have been thoroughly honest for once."

The girl did not move, and for some time she did not speak. When she did it was one questioning word in a colorless voice.

"Why?"

The man laughed, as if he were ill at ease.

"Why?" He repeated her question. "I'm sure I don't know. Believe me, I seldom am guilty of the weakness of telling the truth—the whole truth. You are the only one who has ever heard it from my lips, although—his voice hardened—"current gossip would give you the story somewhat amplified and with a host of harrowing details."

"I thought"—the girl began.

"That I really was possessed of the money my appearance and bearing seem to indicate?" he finished quickly. "They all think that. It has been amusing generally. Well, the fact is I haven't a sou. I'm a punctured balloon, a social confidence man, a rank—pardon the phraseology—four flusher; but, please heaven, with you I am honest."

The girl turned her eyes and looked at him steadily. In the moonlight her beauty made him faint and sick at heart with hopelessness.

"Why?" she asked again simply.

"Because—because," he stammered, "there was something about you different from the rest of womankind—something that touched my respect and pride and—"

He looked at her and smiled. The girl bit her lips.

"I wanted you to know what manner of man I was," he went on. "I had to tell you even at the imminent risk of losing—oh, everything!" he ended vaguely.

"Is poverty such a disgrace?" she asked.

"Yes," he said slowly. "It is blighting, belittling, mean."

"Is poverty never anything but ignoble?" she persisted.

"Never," he replied.

"And you say you've told me the whole truth?" she still questioned. He nodded. The girl rose. Her eyes flashed.

"You haven't," she said, with spirit. "You haven't said a word about why you are poor. You haven't mentioned to me that it was because you shouldered your father's obligations, which you might quite as well have evaded had you been so minded."

"The cause is immaterial. It is the effect that counts," said he.

"You shall not say that," she said hotly.

For a moment he was tempted to take her in his arms and tell her that nothing should matter, nor height nor depth nor powers nor principalities. He was a starving wanderer, and here was food. Then cool, calm judgment returned.

"Exit your pictured hero," he said evenly. "Slow curtain, red slide on the calcium light, creepy music. You have overdrawn him somewhat."

They stood facing each other. The moonlight glinted on the polished brass work of the rail and binnacle. The sleepy little lighthouse blinked its red and white with stoic regularity. The tinkling piano was accompanied by voices raised in gay snatches of song.

The girl's fingers worked nervously. The tears overflowed her eyes and ran unheeded down her face. The man stared helplessly. In the cabin the song came to an end amid much laughter and clapping of hands.

The man came close to the girl. He intended to relieve the tension of the situation by a bit of felicitous chaff. Instead he found her hand in his and his eyes very close to hers. It was something like a groan that escaped him.

"God help me, how I love you!" he cried, all his pent up emotion in the words.

Tom Van Remsen came up from the cabin some time later. He approached the pair by the wheel with a little deprecating cough of warning.

"Come on down and join the fun in the cabin, you two mooners," he said.

The girl sprang up with a happy laugh.

"Tommy, dear," she chided, "please don't speak so disrespectfully of my friends."

Remorseless Progress.

In every great business the chief trouble is to find a powerful and pioneering staff. It is frequently achieved in these days, and especially in America, by a series of remorseless experiments. One person after another gets his chance, and nine-tenths of the number are flung upon the street.—British Weekly.

Writers and Doctors.

It is a curious fact that great writers, speaking generally, have been no lovers of the medical profession. This is doubtless the reason why doctors for the most part cut so sorry a figure in literature. Scribes of all sorts take a special pleasure in gliding at them.—British Medical Journal.

Proud.

"That Mrs. Gilhedge is awfully proud."

"How so?"

"Why, her father tried to advise her, and she wouldn't have it because advice is cheap."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Noiseless Typewriter Needed.

A noiseless typewriter is something devoutly wished for. The constant din of present machines is said to be very trying on the nerves, not only of the operator, but of those around it as well. There was also a time, many years ago, that a medicine for stomach, liver and bowel troubles was sorely needed, but with the introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, over 50 years ago, this long-felt want was supplied. Today it is recognized by everyone to be the best medicine in the world for the above ailments, and thousands of people are now using it exclusively. It positively cures headache, bloating, heartburn, dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness and malaria, fever and ague. It is also invaluable to delicate girls and women who need a tonic and regulator for their weak organs. Try a bottle.

An Elegant Summer Book.

"Restful Recreation Resorts," the 1905 Summer Book issued by the passenger department of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company contains forty-eight pages and cover. The book is printed on heavy white paper, fifty-eight cents being used to illustrate the trips up and down the Columbia river, to the mountains, beaches, inland resorts and mountains of healing. The cover is done in three colors, adding materially to the beauty and effectiveness of the publication, which may be had by sending two cents in stamps to A. L. Craig, General Passenger Agent of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, Portland, Ore. It is a good thing to send to your friends in the East who expect to visit the Lewis and Clark Exposition.

No Secret About It.

It is an secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory, of Hope, Tex. 25c at Patterson & Son's drug store.

Tired out, worn out women cannot sleep, eat or work; seems as if they would fly to pieces. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes strong nerves and rich red blood. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.—W. P. McMillan, Lexington, Ore.

Dying of Famine

is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers, of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at Patterson & Son's drug store, price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

CONTEST NOTICE

Department of the Interior,
United States Land Office, La Grande, Ore.,
June 14, 1905.

A sufficient contest affidavit having been filed in this office by Emil Grotzopp, contestant, against Homestead Entry No. 5664, made November 20, 1900, for the SW<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub> Sec. 10, Tp. 5 S., R. 27 E. W. M., by Antone Abrahamick, contestee, in which it is alleged that Antone Abrahamick died on or about June 14, 1903, that prior to said entryman's death he failed to take a residence on said land and while he was at that time a man of family, he did not move on to the land with his family, but with said family maintained a residence in the city of Heppner, Oregon; that he failed to cultivate the said land and placed no improvements thereon, there being no improvements on the said land except a small cabin which is not habitable at any time of the year; that since the death of said entryman his heirs have abandoned the said land and the said abandonment has existed for a period of more than one year last past; that the heirs of said entryman are Johanne and Antone Abrahamick, a son and daughter, who reside in the city of San Francisco, Calif.

That said alleged absence from said land was not due to his employment in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States as a private soldier, officer, seaman or marine during the war with Spain or during any other war in which the United States may be engaged.

Said parties are hereby notified to appear, respond and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock a. m. on July 24, 1905, before the Master of the Court, at his office in Heppner, Oregon, and that final hearing will be held at ten o'clock a. m. on August 4, 1905, before the Register and Receiver at the United States Land Office in La Grande, Oregon.

The said contestant, having in a proper affidavit, filed May 25, 1905, set forth facts which show that after due diligence, personal service of this notice cannot be made, it is hereby ordered and directed that such notice be given by due and proper publication.
