OREGON'S PREHISTORIC PIG

Eootherium Big as a Cow, Restored by the Berkeley Geologists.

With only a weatherbeaten and semi-petrified skull to base their studies on, the University of California geologists have restored a grotesque pig the size of a cow. This formidable beast has received the equally formidable name Eootherium, and its discovery marks a new kind of ungulate hitherto unknown in the realm of paleontology. The remarkable specimen on which these studies have been constructed was picked out of a rocky cliff high up on the Bridge creek in the John Day region in eastern Oregon. It was found six years ago, but it has taken a long period of careful and slow work in the laboratory at Berkeley to release it intact from its rocky matrix, and a still longer time to study it under the microscope and find in its structure the evidence which warranted its being placed in a new species of pig, so ridiculously different from the modern porker that its restoration seems extremely difficult with scattered bones and bone fragments, which assisted in the restoration of the whole animal. Among these specimens were several cervical vertebrae and portions of the fore and hind legs.

All the bones of this great skeleton that have been found prove beyond a doubt that the original animal must have been a prodigious beast, ten feet long and six or seven feet high, with a head fully two and one-half feet long. In dimensions it resembles a cow, but its appearance is that of a pig, for its boarlike characteristics are unmistakable.—San Francisco Letter in New York Tribune.

Alberta Attracts Many Settlers.

B. W. Greer, general freight agent for the Canadian Pacific at Vancouver, B. C., reports that more people are pouring into the Province of Alberta this year than ever before. The Government land, which has been offered to homeseekers upon very liberal terms, has been rapidly taken up, and the value of all land in the wheat district of Alberta is increasing. Large numbers have come into this section from the United States during the past few months, drawn by the opportunity to secure cheap land. Mr. Greer believes that this section has a great future as an agricultural country, and is especially gratified because the Alberta Winter wheat exhibit took the gold medal at the Lewis and Clark fair.

C. C. Salnz bought 2000 head of sheep of R. W. Turner, of Sand Hollow, and John Adams, of Hardman, last week.

The World's Gold Production.

The world's gold production for last year was one of the largest on record, and the latest figures show that Australasia produced the most, while our country was a close second. But when it comes to producing a reliable remedy for the thousand and one ills of mankind we lead the world, for in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters we possess the best that science can produce. During its 50 years' experience it has never failed to give satisfaction, and because of its reliability has become the standard for sour stomach, belching, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, poor appetite, constipation, biliousness and malaria. If you will only try one bottle you won't accept anything else because it will cure you. Thousands have found this so. We urge you to try it at once.
