Morrow County Turkeys.

Eastern Oregon is bound to become the great turkey-raising section of the Northwest, in the opinion of C. A. Rhea, of Portland, who has just returned from a visit to Gilliam and Morrow counties. "They herd turkeys on those prairies just as they used to herd sheep, in great droves," he said, "and the birds thrive from the time they are hatched until they are ready for market at Thanksgiving."

"One farmer near Cecil, on the Willow Creek Railroad, had a band of 500 turkeys last fall, and the herder used to take them out on the stubble fields in the morning and drive them back to the corral at night. The turkeys fattened on the scattered grain in the fields, and as they did not eat the grass, the owners of the fields did not care how many turkeys were herded in the fields. Finally just before Thanksgiving the big band of turkeys was driven to Coyote Station and placed on board the cars for Portland. The producer was paid 50 cents a head for the birds, and thought he did well, while the same turkeys cost the consumers here from $1.50 to $3 apiece."

"The climate of Eastern Oregon is peculiarly adapted to turkeys, being dry and clear for the better part of the year. The birds are allowed to roam over a vast area in search of grain and seeds, but the herder must be on the lookout constantly for coyotes, for the animals have discovered that turkey meat is juicy and tender, and they will often take chances on being shot while in quest of a bird for supper."

"That region used to be devoted to sheep pasture, when the land belonged to the government and range was free,

It is all cut up into ranches now, and farming has taken the place of wool-growing. The turkey does not interfere with the farming, as sheep would."—The Dalles Chronicle.

Big Shorthorn Deal.

We estimated a few weeks ago in our columns that there would probably be some pretty good deals in Shorthorn circles in the near future, and in the transfer to W. O. Minor of the whole J. L. Metsker herd, one of the deals referred to has been consummated.

Last week Mr. Minor shipped from Hillsdale Farm, Pullman, Wash., to his Mountain Valley Farm, at Heppner, Ore., the whole of J. L. Metsker's herd, consisting of 29 head, including his herd bull, Kepeake, and the rest of the show herd that Mr. Metsker exhibited successfully in 1903. Keepsake was shown in his yearling form and won first at the Oregon and Washington state fairs. He has developed no quite a good bull, very smooth and full of quality. He has been Mr. Metsker's main service bull for some time and is showing some splendid calves. The fine young show cow, Lad's Lucy, b. The Lad for Me, and out of a daughter of Gay Monarch, is suckling a heifer calf by this young bull that would be a credit to any sire. With the addition of this bunch Mr. Minor has considerably the largest herd of registered Shorthorns in the Northwest, in fact his herd claimed that distinction for some years. Mr. Minor is showing his faith by his work. A few such transactions as this will have a strong tendency to establish confidence in this line of trade.—Rural Spirit.

Indicts Foreman.

Helena, Mont., Dec. 30.—The federal grand jury today reported 31 indictments and was discharged by Judge W. H. Hunt. Fourteen of these indictments were made public, and charge various offenses from whiskey-selling to counterfeiting and altering banknotes. Although the remainder of offenses charged were not made public, it is understood they have reference to alleged violations of land and timber laws, and that several prominent citizens of the state are involved.

A story is current here tonight that J. P. Woolman, former United States marshal and a prominent and wealthy stockman, was among the number, being charged with illegally fencing government land in Leton county. Mr. Woolman was foreman of the jury, and when it reported this morning he asked to be excused from further service, which was done. Then the jury retired and later this afternoon returned another, the one supposedly referring to its former foreman. Mr. Woolman said tonight he expected to be indicted, saw it coming and retired, as he did not wish to hamper the jury. The other indictments will probably be made public early next week.

Work on Elgin Road.

George Armour, a railroad contractor who was in the city yesterday, stated that much progress is being made on the extension of the Elgin branch of the O. R. & N. Mr. Armour has a contract for grading several miles of the new road which is building into the heart of the rich Wallowa country.

"We have finished the dirt work on our contract and are now at work on rock cuts," Mr. Armour said yesterday. "Cold weather and snow has interfered very little with our work as we were through with the dirt work before winter weather set in. Snow is several inches deep in the Wallowa country, but it is interfering very little with railroad work now going on. The survey for the extension of the Elgin branch from Wallowa to Joseph has about been completed and there is little doubt but that part of the road will be built as soon as the line to Wallowa is constructed."

"As a result of so much railroad activity the Wallowa country, acknowledged to be one of the richest agricultural sections in the northwest, is attracting attention from outside home-seekers and next spring will see a veritable boom in that country. The country is there and only needs development."

Oregon Has Most Timber.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 1.—Four billion feet of timber were cut in Washington in the year 1905. Two hundred billion feet are still standing, enough, at the rate of last year's cutting, to supply mills for 50 years. This is the estimate made on the year's lumber business in this state by R. L. McCormick, secretary of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company.

"Oregon has twice as much timber standing and is not cutting as fast as Washington," continued Mr. McCormick. "In the timber belt extending from British Columbia to California there is today standing 1000 billion of feet. There was more demand for lumber in this state than ever before."

"Our company sold more timber lands in Washington last year than it bought. Extraordinary activity of demand in Washington this year was due in large measure to the fact that titles are clearer here and there is less suspicion of any land frauds. Exposures at Portland have hurt sales in Oregon and the absence of any such frauds has turned money into Washington."

Asks Long Sentence.

Bellingham, Wash., Jan. 1.—E. L. Ke so, under eight months' sentence in the county jail here for obtaining money under false pretenses, asks that his sentence be changed to five years, because he fears that when he is released he will do violence to those who prosecuted him. He claims to be entirely the victim of misunderstood circumstances. He is a graduate of the University of Indiana, was reform Mayor of Bedford, Ia., in 1884, and was prominent in politics at Guthrie, Okla., later. He came to the Northwest in search of health and worked as a millwright. Although a lawyer, he has not practiced for some time. His desperate frame of mind is caused by a feeling that, having served in prison, he is a branded man for life.

Stockholders' Meeting.

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Heppner Mining Co. will be held at the office of Redfield & Van Vactor, in Heppner, Oregon, on the second Wednesday in February, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of electing the officers and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.
