Politicians and Newspapers.

The country editor has come to learn that the public always accepts him at his own valuation. Journalism is both a business and a profession. So far as it sells news as a commodity, it is a business; so far as it endeavors to direct public opinion and to influence public action, it is a profession. It is an honest business to sell news; it is an honest profession to mold public sentiment, if it is honestly done. The average country editor is not always sure of his own status, because of the uncertain status of his calling. Some country editors look upon themselves as semi-public charges, like many country preachers, and subsist largely on donations made through the good nature and the charity of their patrons or neighbors. This type, we hasten to say, is rapidly disappearing from the country press. If weekly journalism has not so high a place in the respect of its readers and the confidence of its advertisers as the country editor thinks it should have, it is entirely because he has failed to take himself and his business or profession seriously, and he has accepted a place in the general estimation alongside the village joker, the corner-grocery orator and the street-corner gossip.

The Oregon Press Association is doing much to elevate the standard of journalism in the state, and it is setting an example in independence, self-respect and character that may well be followed in neighboring states. For example, the papers in the organization have united in a common plan to sell their space to foreign advertisers at proper rates, which is a good thing; but, what is better, they have determined that the advertising and exploitation which the politicians are ever seeking and usually getting shall be paid for as advertising. Newspapers have an intimate and inescapable relation to politics, and on that account they have ever been used as vehicles to promote the welfare of officeholders and officeholders. Under the direct primary, the profession of officeholding becomes more than ever an individual and personal matter with the officeholder, and the average newspaper, city and country, will be more and more subject to the importunities of the persistent man after a job for notice and commendation. It is a perfectly proper thing to require pay for such notice outside, of course, of current political news or gossip; it is essentially dishonest to accept pay for commendation. The distinction is clear. All newspapers understand it; the public understands it. There is no chance or excuse for anybody to be deceived about it. The Press Association made it all plain by adoption of the following resolution:

In the matter of political advertising, we recommend that space be sold to candidates on the same basis that it is sold to commercial advertisers, no contract for advertising carrying with it an express or implied obligation binding the paper to the support of such candidate.

The Oregon Press Association—the country editor—is now definitely committed to this correct policy. Any person whose advertiser shall pay for it. Any person who seeks news apart favor on that basis won't get it. All this is good for the candidates, too. For example, when any officeholder is approached with a proposition to pay $100, $200, or $300, or even $800, to a newspaper for advertising, it is proper for him to inquire what kind of advertising, who is to write the advertisements, and whether editorial support or commendation goes with it? If he does not get editorial support, he will then know whether or not he really desires so much advertising—in that kind of a paper; and, if he is to get it, he will understand that the newspaper is violating its solemn and formal obligation to all other papers in the Oregon Press Association. No doubt all the others will do everything in their power to bespurn the venal journal at the odium it deserves. We hope so. We think so. Next year, if there is reason to think that any newspaper has thus violated the high ethics of real journalism, and broken faith with its fellow-journals and with the public, we shall expect to see an investigating committee appointed by the association, with authority to ascertain the facts, and to make them public.—Oregonian.

Only 16 Warships.

New York, Jan. 13.—Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan delivered a sensational speech at the Patriotic society today. He declared that the navy of the United States was far below the strength the public believed, and instead of having 40 fighting ships, as appeared on paper, there were really only 18 ships of fighting class. Of these two are out of order, so that the real navy consisted of 16 ships.

He compared the American navy with that of England and showed that the United States was so far inferior that it was almost useless to hope that the United States would ever catch up. "We greatly need a merchant marine, but we are more in need of battleships," continued Coghlan. "The war in the east taught us that battleships are the only vessels to decide a war. We must build more battleships if we want to hold our own."

The speech caused a stir among the 200 members present. Coghlan's fearlessness in speaking publicly of the weakness of our navy has caused much comment.

W. J. Bryan's Letters.

W. J. Bryan will write a series of letters while on his two-year tour of foreign lands. These letters will appear once a week in a select list of the leading American daily newspapers, among which is The Portland Journal.

The Bryan letters in The Sunday Journal will make clear the point of view of foreign countries on many of the questions which now confront us.

Few men are better qualified to treat large questions in a large way than Mr. Mr. Bryan, and no one who wishes to keep abreast of the times can afford to miss these letters.

The Sunday Journal is a great newspaper, filled with "good things." With its beautiful color supplements, its cartoonists, and with all the world's news by leased wire, and the home news, The Sunday Journal is a thoroughly representative newspaper.

The Journal is "the paper of the multitude," in sympathy with and pledged to the cause of the masses of mankind—"equal rights to all"—a square deal.

Two Hundred Families Out of Coal

The coal famine which has swept over this entire section of the northwest is acute at Payette, where they have no wood. The schools have been compelled to close and there are 200 families out of fuel. Agent E. C. Moore yesterday wrote to O. R. & N. officials for authority to furnish La Grande two cars of company coal to relieve the situation until our dealers can secure a supply.—La Grande Observer.

A Grim Tragedy.

is daily essential, in thousands of homes, as death claims, in each one, another victim of Consumption or Pneumonia. But when Coughs and Colds are properly treated, the tragedy is averted. F. G. Huntley, of Oaklandon, Ind., writes: "My wife had the consumption, and three doctors gave her up. Finally she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which cured her, and today she is well and strong." It kills the germs of all diseases. One dose relieves. Guaranteed at 50c and $1.00 by Patterson & Son, druggists. Trial bottle free.

LA GRIPPE—PNEUMONIA

So many people who have apparently recovered from an attack of La Grippe are stricken with Pneumonia. This is due to the fact that the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs are left weakened and unable to resist disease.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR

not only cures La Grippe Coughs, and prevents Pneumonia, but strengthens the Lungs so they will not be susceptible to the development of serious lung troubles. Do not take chances with some unknown preparation that may contain some harmful drug when FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR costs you no more and is safe and sure. Contains no opiates.

I had a bad case of La Grippe about ten years ago which left my Lungs so weak that I have been troubled more or less every winter since until I used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR, which cured me completely and my Lungs no longer trouble me.—J. H. BROWNING, D.D.S., Orrick, Mo.

G. VACHER, 157 Osgood St., Chicago, says: "My wife had a very severe case of La Grippe, and it left her with a very bad cough. She tried a bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR and it gave immediate relief."

Three sizes—25c, 50c, $1.00. The 50-cent size contains two and one half times as much as the small size and the $1.00 bottle almost six times as much. Refuse Substitutes.
