

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

"Tom, Dick and Harry," with a trio of funmakers, Bickel, Watson and Wrotche, are pleasing big houses on the road.

Henry C. Mortimer has been engaged to originate a role in "The Lucky Miss Dean" at the Madison Square theater, New York.

Henry W. Savage has sold the South African rights of "The Prince of Pilsen" and "King Dodo" to James Nelson of Johannesburg.

Joseph Cayne appears as an Indian squaw in a burlesque of "The Squaw Man," which is one of the features of "Coming Thru' the Rye."

Channey Olcott has resumed his tour in "Edmund Burke." During the next three months he will fill engagements in the principal southern cities.

Joseph Cavithorn will begin rehearsals of a new play, "Apartments to Let," by John J. McNally, on Jan. 29. Mr. Cavithorn will appear as a janitor.

John E. Houshaw, Agnes Cain Brown and other members of "The Sho Gun" company were entertained at dinner in Duluth recently by the Japanese consul.

The chief sensations that run through "When the World Sleeps" embrace the burning mills, the escape from the coming jail, the chase of the fugitive, the midnight murder and the swim for life.

FACTS FROM FRANCE.

In Paris the average price of pure milk is 12 cents a gallon.

The average number of residents to the acre in Paris is no less than 128.

There are nearly 700,000 apartments or lodgings in the French metropolis which run for less than $100 a year. About 47,000 bring $800 or more.

All the theatrical and amusement announcements of Paris are posted on pillar billboards that are placed at intervals along the boulevards. It is against the law to disfigure walls with posters.

All Paris is reading and discussing the memoirs of the Philadelphia dentist, Dr. Evans, the friend of Napoleon III, which have just been published and which contain a most excellent description of the last days of the second empire.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Criticism, like charity, should begin at home.

Apologies are like tears. They should be suppressed.

Don't sit down too long to rest if you have any desire to reach the top.

No man likes it when callers tell his wife that she is working too hard.

Don't tell your troubles. The exercise they get in the telling makes them grow.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Matelasse makes the handsomest and costliest of all of the new lounging robes.

Very short coats reaching just to the hips are seen in some of the newest tailor makes.

The empire coat is the thing this winter, and some very graceful models have been exhibited.

Long black gloves, long enough to wrinkle up on the arm, are being worn with all sorts of gowns.

The new linen turnover collars are fully two inches deep and are decorated with tiny linen covered buttons.

Buttons are used in every conceivable way. Tiny lace or pearl ones trim the sheers of blouses, and big ones, elaborate or plain, trim coats and suits and dresses.

Go in' to the Circus

(Copyright, 1905, by J. W. Muller.)

Coming home from the village one afternoon with his horse and buggy, with the lines loose in his hand and his thoughts fixed on the hay crop, Jabez Parker suddenly ran across something to attract his attention.

Two miles from home and on a barn by the roadside two men were at work pasting up circus posters. They had the front of the barn pretty well covered, and they finished their work as Jabez sat and looked at them. There were lions, tigers, elephants, giraffes, galloping horses and what not, with a woman walking a tight rope and a clown making everybody laugh, and the good old man, who had never seen a circus in his life, even as a boy, sat there long after the men had departed and figured it all out in imagination. Presently he heard a voice saying:

"Durn my buttons, but I'm goin' to take in that circus or bust!"

It was his own voice, and it almost jumped him off the seat. His heart was in his mouth for a moment, but then he gained courage to say "get up" to the old horse and muttered to himself:

"Yes, sir, I'm nearly sixty years old and never saw a circus, but I'm goin' to begin now. I expect ma will make a terrible fuss over it, but I ain't goin' to let her turn me aside. I dunno what's come over me, but if it's wicked to go to a circus then I'm goin' to be wicked."

He reached home to unharness and go to work again, and he said nothing of what was in his mind until supper had been eaten and the milking done. Then as he sat on the piazza with his old wife he carelessly remarked:

"Ma, I see that George Williams' barn is all covered with circus pictures."

"And he a Christian man?" gasped the wife.

"Waal, you know, folks don't look at circuses the way they used to."

"What do you mean by that, Jabez?"

"Why, a circus ain't considered wicked, I dunno as they ever was wicked, but folks used to think that way."

"I don't want to hear you talkin' that way, Jabez. The circus was always wicked and always will be. It's one of the broad roads leadin' down to perdition."

"I've never seen a circus," said Jabez after awhile.

"And you never will—not as long as you live with me."

"I've often wondered where the wickedness comes in."

"Then you must be blind! Don't women, or things called women, dress up in short skirts and ride hossback and jump through hoops? Can you imagine anything more wicked than that?"

"What makes you call that wicked?"

"Because it is, and you know it, and there's no use to talk about it any more. I've lived with you for thirty-nine years, and I know you from head to heel. Jabez, was you thinkin' of goin' to that circus?"

"Kinder thinkin'."

"I had a feelin' in my bones that you was. Waal, you stop it. I won't have it for a minute."

"Say, ma, I'm a-goin'."

"Jabez Parker!"

"Yes, sir, I'm a-goin'. I've never been to a circus, but I'm goin' to take one in before I die. I'm a-goin' to see the elephants, lions and tigers, and I'm a-goin' to see them women in short skirts. I don't believe it'll hurt me any more than to see a boss race at the county fair."

"But I told you to turn your back when they raced."

"Yes, but I wanted to see which hoss came in ahead. I saw, and I don't believe I was one mite the wickeder for it."

"But a circus, Jabez—a circus! I tell you you can't go. If you do you needn't expect to find me here when you come home. I never could live with you for an hour ag'in."

Jabez Parker was the soul of good nature, but when aroused he had a streak of the mule in him. He had said he was going to the circus, and his wife's opposition only made him the more determined. The subject was dropped that evening and was hardly referred to during the next week. Then the date of the circus came along, and one morning Jabez said:

"Ma, I'll be home in time to do the milkin'."

"What do you mean?"

"I'm goin' to town to see the circus."

The wife looked at him and saw that he was determined, and she said no more until he was ready to drive away. Then she observed:

"Goodby, Jabez. I don't 'spose we shall ever see each other ag'in."

He echoed her goodby and drove off, and she sat on the piazza and cried for an hour. She was still at it when some one drove up, and she looked up to see her minister standing before her. To his inquiry as to the cause of her sorrow she told her tale, and when it was finished he said:

"There's my wife and boys out in the carriage. Hurry up and get your Sunday clothes on."

"But what for?"

"We'll find room in the carriage for you, and I'll buy your circus ticket."

Jabez got home half an hour ahead of his wife. He was looking around the sitting room to see if she had left a note or anything, when she entered and said:

"Say, Jabez, I said 'twas wicked, but after seein' all the animals and the women in the short skirts and havin' all the peanuts and lemonade I could hold I have changed my mind. It ain't wicked a bit, and if you'll start that fire like a good man I'll have supper on the table in three shakes of a lamb's tail."

Killed During Heavy Rain.

Denver, July 15.—During a down-pour of rain last night Charles Hollingshead, Jr., aged 10 years, was killed by lightning, and Miss Eliza Hann, aged 34 years, died of heart failure due to over exertion in running through the storm to her home. Both deaths were reported to the Coroner today. Young Hollingshead was returning home when lightning struck a telegraph pole near where the boy was walking and a flooded sidewalk communicated the deadly fluid to his body. His body was not found until this morning.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: E. J.
