A freak in the bird family was a pure white robin which was killed by Frank Roberts at his home in this city. The bird has been making headquarters at Mr. Roberts' place for some time. With the exception of the white coat of feathers, the bird had the appearance and action in every way of the robin. In fact the bird with the different colored clothes from his red breasted relatives attempted to make friends and associates with the common birds in digging worms and other pastimes, but was looked upon with a suspicious eye. The white robin was sent out to D. Cox, the taxidermist, for mounting.

Postmasters are required to put box rent due cards in all rented boxes the 20th of the month preceding the close of the quarter, and all boxes not paid for on or before the first day of the quarter must be declared vacant by the postmaster and rented to anyone applying therefor. Patrons of the Heppner postoffice are requested to govern themselves accordingly.

BASKET BALL ANTICS

Minor & Co. Win Over Thomson Bros. and Gilliam & Bisbee Defeat National Bank.

That was an awful twist the jolly salesmen took on last Friday night at basket ball. It kept the spectators guessing whether they were playing basket ball or wrestling catch-as-catch-can holds. The ball would be tossed up and then there would be a scramble similar to a scrimmage in a foot ball game.

Minor & Co. and Thomson Bros. were the first to participate and they certainly did battle royal. Minor & Co. won by a small margin.

The First National Bank then took a "fall" out of Gilliam & Bisbee and from the score one would think that the "money sharks" were falling most of the time. Conser and Gilliam each tossed a goal and distinguished themselves in other features during the progress of the game. We have been told that Gilliam & Bisbee's score consisted of three figures, at any rate they won by a fair margin.

W. G. Scott, the Lexington enthusiast, referred the games in an impartial manner.

CROP PROSPECTS.

Crops in Fine Shape. Plenty of Grass and Some Bad Roads.

A Gazette representative spent Sunday with C. C. Rhea at his ranch on Rhea creek. In going down the Willow creek road we found that the same needed working very badly in some places and the same can be said of the hill road across to Rhea creek.

Crop prospects were certainly never better. Some of the late fall sown grain is just now getting through the ground in good shape, while the earlier sown is well up and has a splendid and thrifty growth. The farmers along Clark canyon were drilling and we observed one farmer sowing grain in the stubble. We noticed several farmers plowing and in most places the soil was as black as mud. On the Fuller and Wharton place, known as the Borg ranch, they were breaking sod with a gang plow and six mules. The soil turned over just like old ground and had much the same appearance.

The Rhea ranch, once noted for stock, is now being converted into a grain producer. Large tracts of this famous old place have been plowed and sown to grain, and Mr. Rhea started a three bottom gang to breaking sod Monday morning. Curt is proving to be quite a farmer. He has fixed up the old ranch and has a "place for every thing, and every thing to its place." He fed a couple of ears of beef steers and his stock cattle have pulled through the winter fine.

Grass, though short, is very thick and we were informed that it was the best in years.
