Woolgrowers of Umatilla county threaten to boycott the buyers on wool sales day and pool their product and send it East with a salesman to the manufacturer, says a Pendleton dispatch of recent date. Heretofore the sheepmen have sold their wool on sales day to the highest bidder, but there was much dissatisfaction with the prices paid last year. All the sellers are firm in the belief that they were jobbed by the buyers last year and that a combination existed among the buyers on the ground to hold the price down so that they were paid a cent or two cents on the average below what the price of the wool in the East warranted.
