

The Song of the Hair

There are four verses. Verse 1. Ayer's Hair Vigor makes the hair grow. Verse 2. Ayer's Hair Vigor stops falling hair. Verse 3. Ayer's Hair Vigor cures dandruff. Verse 4. Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color to gray hair. The chorus is sung by millions.

"Before using Ayer's Hair Vigor I had very thin and very poor hair. But I continued to use the Vigor until my hair greatly improved in every way. I have used it off and on for the past ten years."—Mrs. M. DACKMOND, Newark, N. J.

Old Age and Work.

Old people make a great mistake when they give up work. Many men who have made a competency in business and feel entitled to retire from active work find themselves declining in health and becoming prematurely old for want of occupation. In most aged persons the vital functions continue in active exercise under normal conditions, but if the regularity and moderation of business life are departed from trouble will surely follow.—London Lancet.

Longevity of Car Wheels.

Has anybody ever stopped to think how many miles the wheels of a railroad car travel before they wear out? Statistics gathered from various roads show that perfect car wheels often roll from three hundred thousand to four hundred and fifty thousand miles before they have to be turned down. Wheels with flaws in them run only about fifty to ninety thousand miles.

For Home.

"No, Mr. Smalley," said the beautiful young girl, "I never can marry a man as little and short as you are."
"Oh, I'm too short, am I?" he said, with a hollow, mirthless laugh. "Well, Miss Ermytrude, with your permission I will just go out and stretch myself a little."

Drawing himself up to his full height, such as it was, he took his hat, cane, gloves, and departure.

Not So Grasping as That.

Elderly Uncle—Like all other young chaps just out of college, you'll be wanting to marry, of course, some of these days.

Nephew Harold (with a bright blush)—Not "some of these days," uncle. Only one of 'em—Muriel, the youngest.

AN EMBEZZLING ELEPHANT.

The vicious system of graft has crept even into the animal world, and corrupted a resident of the New York Zoological Park. Gunda, the elephant, is the guilty party. He has hitherto been considered a most respectable and upright member of society. A writer in the New York Tribune tells the sorry tale. Gunda's many visitors have been in the habit of presenting pennies to Jack Gleason, the keeper, which he would place on the floor of the elephant house.

Gunda would then pick up these coins with his trunk and deposit them in a small box above his head, and would ring a bell to register the amount of the deposit. Lately the business has become very heavy, owing to the thousands of visitors, and Gleason decided to go over the "books" and figure out his exact receipts.

The result is that Gunda is in disgrace, and will be made the subject of an official investigation by the side of which the late prosecution of bank and insurance grafter will look tame. The details of the defaulting Gunda are as follows:

Gunda certainly deposited the pennies in the box and as certainly rang the bell, but thereafter his ways became dark and devious. No sooner was Gleason's back turned than he would pick them out with his trunk and put them into his mouth. When a visitor appeared Gunda would put a cent on the floor and go through the form of dropping it in again, and ring the bell.

Gleason sought to stop the fraud by driving small staples into the bottom of the box, so that the penny could drop between them. This presented no difficulties to Gunda, who simply elongated the tip of his trunk and plucked the cent out. Then long nails, which acted as a barrier, were put in place of the staples.

But still the receipts and the register did not agree. One day Gleason, turning unexpectedly, caught the elephant in the act of reaching to the top of the partition wall with his trunk.

Gunda, on seeing he was discovered, affected an air of easy nonchalance, which, however, did not deceive his keeper, who climbed to the top of the wall. The mystery was solved. There lay pennies, old and new, in luxurious profusion, and Gunda hung his head and sulked.

PICTURESQUE DRESS.

Worn by Native Women in Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

It is believed that many American and European tourists will be attracted to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec as soon as they learn that the National Tehuantepec railroad has been completed and opened for traffic and regular steamship service has been established between Coatzacoalcas and United States and European ports, and between the Pacific coast terminal, Salina Cruz and San Francisco, says the New York Tribune. The Isthmus of Tehuantepec has heretofore been so far removed from through lines of travel that comparatively few pleasure seekers have visited it. In its winter climate the Isthmus is unexcelled. The air is bracing and refreshing. Even in summer the heat is not oppressive, and at Santa Lucracia, where an altitude of several hundred feet is reached, there are all of the comforts that are to be found at most summer resorts in the United States. In order to accommodate visitors large hotels have been provided at Coatzacoalcas, Santa Lucracia, Salina Cruz and other places along the line of railroad.

There are many interesting things to be seen on the Isthmus, not the least of which are the native Tehuanas or Indian women. They wear a peculiar dress that is to be seen in no other part of Mexico. It is called the Huipil dress. It consists of a short cape, made of white or colored muslin, with a deep lace border of white or the palest lavender, a lace collar, short sleeves, with long ruffles; a short muslin jacket of some bright color, with low neck and short sleeves, and a petticoat which is simply an oblong piece of crimson or dark blue cotton cloth, wound around the loins, where it is confined by a sash, and reaching to the ankles. This peculiar dress is worn by every Tehuana woman and child, without respect to age or social position. It is worn in many different ways, according to the occasion, and is always of the brightest colors obtainable.

The market place in Tehuantepec is a scene of brilliancy each morning when the women gather to do their trading. One of the staple food products is the iguana. This animal is sold alive. It is a foot or two long, and in order to make it marketable its mouth is sewed up, to prevent it from biting, and its legs are tied behind its back. The Tehuanas are noted for their cleanliness. The men are indolent, of short stature and slight build. They wear white linen shirts, with the tails outside of the trousers. Men, women and children go barefooted.

There are a number of American planters on the Isthmus. Most of their holdings are in the interior. These plantations are principally devoted to raising coffee and sugar.

As a side trip the American tourist may go over the new Pan-American railroad, which now runs from San Geronimo, a station on the National Tehuantepec road, to within 100 miles of the Guatemala border. Considerable progress has been made in the construction of this last 100 miles, and the builders declare that in less than a year the road will be finished to the Guatemala border. Deer, wild hogs and other game which are to be found in tropical Mexico abound all along the route. There are no restrictive game laws, and the sportsman can hunt and kill to his heart's desire. The surf bathing at Salina Cruz, both winter and summer, is excellent, and so is the deep water fishing.

Try to Smuggle Jewelry.

To prevent smuggling by tourists, an evil said to be growing, jewelers in this city and elsewhere will ask the Treasury Department officials to take a new attitude on the subject. The practice has been to bring proceedings to forfeit the smuggled articles and sometimes a compromise is effected permitting the tourist to keep the jewelry on payment of the actual duties. The jewelers say that tourists who smuggle should be prosecuted criminally.

The situation is said to invite smuggling, since detection usually means nothing more than payment of duties which should be paid anyway and there is the chance of getting through without paying anything. The Importers and Cutters' Association reports from abroad indicate that duties are paid on only an insignificant part of the jewelry which Americans buy abroad and bring back to New York. According to prominent jewelers here the smuggling of jewelry has become a fad of tourists who take greater and greater pride in their skill in deceiving the customs inspectors.

Several fine necklaces and brooches of pearls and diamonds are said to have been exhibited lately to jewelers in this city for valuation and owners found to their surprise that the articles could be duplicated here for much less than the prices paid abroad. Jewelers are convinced that these jewels have been smuggled. The explanation given by the jewelers is that they can buy abroad at bottom prices and even with the duties and a fair profit added the total is below what tourists eager to "beat the government" are ready to pay.—New York Times.

Cathedral for Sale.

The Amsterdam correspondent of the London Pall Mall Gazette writes in his paper of a remarkable proposal that is being made by the Protestant community of Utrecht that they should sell to the Catholics the ancient cathedral of the city, which is described as the largest Gothic historical building in the Netherlands. The idea was first mooted, oddly enough, by one of the Protestant pastors, Mynheer Gunning, who is regarded as the leader of the Protestant body in Utrecht. His grounds for making the proposal are strictly utilitarian. He estimates that the buildings would realize a million florins, with which sum it would be possible to build five new churches, and endow each with a living. It should perhaps be explained that the cathedral is said to be in a half ruinous condition. During a fearful storm in 1674, a great part of the nave collapsed, and has never been repaired.

Thackeray's Fantomime.

William Makepeace Thackeray was always too genial, too generous, too open handed, to be an accumulator of this world's goods, and in spite of the large earnings of his pen he died a poor man. Shortly before his death his friend, John Leech, the cartoonist, called upon him and found him in his study writing—writing and sighing at the monotony of his work.

"Why don't you have a holiday," said Leech, "and take your girls to the seaside?"
The great novelist made no verbal answer, but, rising slowly, plunged his hands to the very bottom of his pockets, brought these receptacles out, shook them vigorously without eliciting a rattle of coin, replaced them and then resumed his seat.

BAD BLOOD THE SOURCE OF ALL DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength. When this life stream is flowing through the system in a state of purity and richness we are assured of perfect and uninterrupted health; because pure blood is nature's safe-guard against disease. When, however, the body is fed on weak, impure or polluted blood, the system is deprived of its strength, disease germs collect, and the trouble is manifested in various ways. Pustular eruptions, pimples, rashes and the different skin affections show that the blood is in a feverish and diseased condition as a result of too much acid or the presence of some irritating humor. Sores and Ulcers are the result of morbid, unhealthy matter in the blood, and Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders that will continue to grow worse as long as the poison remains. These impurities and poisons find their way into the blood in various ways. Often a sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, leaves the refuse and waste matters to sour and form uric and other acids, which are taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the circulation. Coming in contact with contagious diseases is another cause for the poisoning of the blood; we also breathe the germs and microbes of Malaria into our lungs, and when these get into the blood in sufficient quantity it becomes a carrier of disease instead of health. Some are so unfortunate as to inherit bad blood, perhaps the dregs of some old constitutional disease of ancestors is handed down to them and they are constantly annoyed and troubled with it. Bad blood is the source of all disease, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and purified the body is sure to suffer in some way. For blood troubles of any character S. S. S. is the best remedy ever discovered. It goes down into the circulation and removes any and all poisons, supplies the healthful properties it needs, and completely and permanently cures blood diseases of every kind. The action of S. S. S. is so thorough that hereditary taints are removed and weak, diseased blood made strong and healthy so that disease cannot remain. It cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., and does not leave the slightest trace of the trouble for future outbreaks. The whole volume of blood is renewed and cleansed after a course of S. S. S. It is also nature's greatest tonic, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and is absolutely harmless to any part of the system. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Book on the blood and any medical advice free to all who write.

Bow Wow.

Edgar Saltus, the brilliant novelist, was asked by a young lady at a tea if he thought that the use of quotations was a good thing.

"Quotations are only good," said Mr. Saltus, "when they are extremely apt. There was once a witty Irishman, James E. Fitzgerald, who made excellent use of a quotation in a political speech. During this speech he was repeatedly interrupted by a butcher, the proprietor of a large sausage-making plant. An adherent of Fitzgerald's finally took offense at the butcher's mocking remarks, and yelled:

"Hey, you, leave politics alone, and go back to your sausage machines!"
The butcher glared at the man and retorted:

"If I had this speaker in one of my sausage machines, I'd soon make mince-meat of him!"

"Then Mr. Fitzgerald quoted from the platform with a smile:
"Is thy servant a dog that thou shouldst do this thing?"

A Queer Error.

The late Ambrose L. Thomas, the noted advertising expert of Chicago, once told a story about two doctors in an address on advertising.

"To illustrate my point," he said, apropos of an advertising error, "I'll tell you about my friend Bones. Bones was taken down very bad, and, his family physician being out of town, a specialist was called in.

"But the family physician unexpectedly returned, and he and the specialist entered Bones' chamber together. They found the man in a high fever and partially unconscious. Each put his hand under the bed clothes to feel Bones' pulse, and each accidentally got hold of the other's hand.

"He has typhoid," said the first physician.

"Nothing of the kind," said the other. "He's only drunk."

Plenty of Parents.

At Quimper, in Brittany, the wife of a man named Le Saux gave birth to a boy. The father took the child and sold it for £8 to the wife of the local butcher, Mme. Bonan. The woman presented it to her husband as her own newly-born infant and Bonan hastened to register the child's birth.

Le Saux, fearing that he might get into trouble with the police, next consulted the butcher, whom he supposed to be a party to the fraud. The duped husband threw Le Saux out of the house. The latter then registered the birth of his own child. In the eye of the law, therefore, the infant has claims on two separate families and enjoys the unique distinction of being the son of two mothers.—Paris News.

She Left Too Soon.

Two young women were seated together in a Broadway car, when a well-dressed man of middle age entered. One of the women bowed to him.

"Who is that?" her companion asked.

"He's the father of one of my children," the first speaker replied.

Whereupon an elderly spinster of severe countenance, who was seated next, gasped and nearly fainted.

"Isn't it queer," the young woman went on, "that I should have three pairs of twins—all girls, too?"

The spinster changed her seat in a hurry—too quickly to hear any further facts concerning the young woman's public school class.—New York Globe.

His Natural Modesty.

"Two mutual friends sat near a man at lunch one day.

"What makes him look so glum this morning?" said the first.

"Why," said the other, "he visited an Egyptian palmist last night, and the fellow told him his wife would marry twice, and the second husband would be a remarkably fine chap."

"Aha! He thinks that's rather a reflection on himself, eh?"

"Not at all. He thinks his wife was married before, and never told him."—Washington Star.
