GARIBALDI'S WOOING.

The whole life of the great Italian liberator, Garibaldi, was one of romantic adventure; but nothing else in it was more romantic than his wooing, which is described by his own narrative. He had been driven from Italy in 1830 and landed in South America, where he joined the struggle then being carried on by several small States against the Empire of Brazil. He had with him many devoted comrades, whom he loved with his whole heart. One day, however, he was shipwrecked on the Brazilian coast of Santa Catharina, and several of his dearest friends were drowned in getting to shore. The survivors at once joined the local army, led a successful attack on Laguna, and were hailed as liberators. Garibaldi was made chief of the captured Brazilian fleet. He paced up and down the deck of his flagship, but in no victor's mood. The loss of so many friends had filled him with melancholy, and he began to feel his loneliness. His mind turned to a natural remedy. He determined to seek a bride among these people who so idolized him.

"The loss of Luigi, Edoardo and others of my countrymen," he wrote in his own story, "left me utterly isolated. I felt quite alone in the world. I needed a human heart to love me, one that I could always keep near me. I felt that unless I found one at once life would become intolerable."

"By chance I cast my eyes toward the houses of the Barra, a hill on the south side of the entrance to the lagoon, where a few simple and picturesque dwellings were visible. Outside one of these, by means of my telescope, I espied a young woman; and forthwith I gave orders for my boat to be got out, as I wished to go ashore."

This girl was Anita Riberias, 18 years old, a young woman of unusual beauty, of great bodily strength and endurance, and of an unusually fine type of intellect; as romantic as Garibaldi, and as untiring as he in her labors for liberty.

"I landed," says Garibaldi, "and making for the houses where I expected to find the object of my excursion, I had just given up hopes of seeing her again, when I met an inhabitant of the place whose acquaintance I had made soon after our arrival. He invited me to take coffee in his house."

"We entered, and the first person, who met my eyes was the damsel who had attracted me ashore. We both remained enraptured and silent, gazing on one another like two people who meet not for the first time, and who seek in each other's faces something that will make it easier to recall a forgotten past. At last I greeted her with the words, in Italian, 'Thou oughtest to be mine.'"

"My insolence was magnetic. I had formed a tie, pronounced a decree, which death alone could annul."

The young woman was at that time betrothed by her father to a wealthy suitor, whom she had refused to marry. As her father and the suitor were determined, however, and she had no option, the arrival of Garibaldi must have been extremely welcome. In a moment she had given her life to him.

Her father refusing to change her destiny, Garibaldi came ashore with a small party a few nights later and carried her off by force—with her entire consent—and they were married at another port.

Later, when he was fighting for Uruguayan independence, she rode with him through privation and starvation over the prairies; and on one march, while they rode together, he carried their three-months-old son in a handkerchief slung round his neck.

Never were man and wife more passionately devoted to each other than these two; and when, in the terrible retreat from Rome in 1849, she succumbed to fever and died in a hut in the marshes of the Po delta, it seemed to the soldier that not only the light of Italy, but the light of life itself, had gone out.

A Long Wait.

Vira, the Morose's sabbie cook, announced to her mistress that she intended to be married the next week. Mrs. Morose was filled with regret. "O Vira," she cried, "I was afraid William would persuade you at last! You said you'd never leave us."

"Why, I isn't gwine to leabe you, honey," and Vira patted the shoulder of her young mistress in a comforting way. "I's jes' natchelly marrying dat William now to keep him from pesterin me. He's been ruin' too much lately, an' yet if I cuss him off, he'll get into mixtrous company. I's marrying dat boy to save him."

"Yes," said Mrs. Morose, somewhat reassured by Vira's tone, but slightly bewildered, nevertheless, "I know it will be a fine thing for him, Vira, but won't he want to take you away?"

"Whar he get de money?" inquired Vira, returning to her work of beating eggs with renewed vigor. "I's sabbie de money fo' his honeymoon trip, and I's got his plans all laid out fo' him. He's got a ticket out to California an' to bring my ole farder back Eas'; an' den I's gwine send him down Souf fo' my sister, an' den up in Canady fo' my brudder, an' when he gets dat famly all rounded up, an' has to support 'em mostly, you 'ink he's gwine be in a hurry to hab me to support, honey?"

BEST PRESCRIPTION

CAN BE EASILY MIXED AT HOME AND CURES RHEUMATISM.

Full Directions to Make and Take This Simple Home-Made Mixture—Makes Kidneys Filter Out Acids.

When an eminent authority announced in the Scraper, Pa., Times that he had found a new way to treat that dread American disease, Rheumatism, with just common, every-day drugs found in any drug store, the physicians were slow indeed to attach much importance to his claims. This was only a few months ago. Today nearly every newspaper in the country, even the metropolitan dailies, are announcing it and the splendid results achieved. It is so simple that any one can prepare it at home at small cost. It is made up as follows: Get from any good druggist Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kagon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, making an absolutely harmless home remedy at little cost.

Rheumatism, as every one knows, is a symptom of deranged kidneys. It is a condition produced by the failure of the kidneys to properly filter or strain from the blood the uric acid and other matter which, if not eradicated, either in the urine or through the skin pores, remains in the blood, decomposes and forms about the joints and muscles, causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.

This prescription is said to be a splendid healing, cleansing and invigorating tonic to the kidneys, and gives almost immediate relief in all forms of bladder and urinary troubles and backache. He also warns people in a leading New York paper against the indiscriminate use of many patent medicines.

ACROSS SWEDEN BY CANAL.

Waterway Ericsson Helped to Build Now a Route for Tourist Travel.

At least one canal in the world has become a favorite route of pleasure travel. This is the Gota canal, the building of which converted that part of Sweden south of Stockholm into an island, says the New York Sun.

The canal crosses the land from sea to sea, forming an uninterrupted line of communication 200 miles long between the Baltic and the Kattegat. The journey takes two days and a half.

Ships drawing ten feet of water may pass from sea to sea through this chain of lakes, cuttings, locks and regulated rivers constituting the Gota canal.

Ninety-nine years ago this gigantic piece of work was planned and twenty-four years elapsed before communication was finally established. The names of some of the greatest men in engineering science are associated with the canal.

A part of the River Gota, which carries the water route to the Kattegat, had long before been canalized and the famous Swedenborg, who was a daring engineer before he was a strange dreamer and the founder of a religious sect, had a hand in the work. But when the time came to use the Gota river as a part of the new canal the antiquated locks were discarded and the brothers Nils and John Ericsson began their great career as engineers by canalizing the western part of the Gota river and replacing Swedenborg's work by a series of eleven monumental locks cut out of the solid rock.

It takes seventy-four locks to lift the vessels from one level to another and lower them again. Each steamer leaving Stockholm is gradually lifted 305 feet above the sea before it reaches the water parting at Lake Wiken in the center of the peninsula. Then it is carefully lowered again from one lock to another till it is once more at sea level in the city of Gothenburg.

At many points where several locks are passed in succession the passengers have time to walk along the banks of the canal for a closer view of one or another attraction such as the magnificent falls of Trollhattan, which are circumvented by the eleven locks that made the Ericssons famous.

The whole trip is charming, for there is great variety in the constantly changing scene. The contrasts are sometimes very abrupt, as, for example, when the vessel emerges from a thick forest of silver birches upon one of the big lakes, whose further shore can scarcely be seen.

Some things are done in a quaint way on these little vessels. An account book with a pencil attached hangs on the wall and everybody is expected to jot down the number of meals he eats and the extras he orders, foot up the total at the end of the voyage and settle the bill, according to his own calculations.

ENGLAND'S RICH MEN.

There Are Twenty-One Persons with More than $50,000 a Year.

Although Great Britain is doubtless behind America in the number of millionaires residing on her shores, there are twenty-one lucky individuals in England who manage to subsist on incomes of "upward of $50,000 a year."

Such is the interesting information conveyed in the fiftieth report of the inland revenue commission, issued as a blue book, says the London Mail.

Scotland and Ireland, although by no means devoid of men of money, have no representatives among the "exceeding $50,000" division. In Scotland, however, reside nine persons who possess annual incomes of from $10,000 to $50,000, while statistics show that ten people in Ireland have the comfortable sums of anything from $5,000 to $10,000 a year coming in.

One hundred and eighty-seven thousand eight hundred and eighty-five persons, excluding employees, in England paid income tax on under $200 per annum, as against 33,766 in Scotland and 12,732 in Ireland.

The total income tax during 1905-6 was $107,022,457, paid by 379,456 persons.

Mean Trick.

A teacher in a Wyandotte County school recently reprimanded a country boy who acts as school janitor for putting off some of his duties until Sunday.

"Don't you know you broke the Sabbath by doing that?" she asked.

The boy looked puzzled, but promised not to do it again. At recess he asked of another boy:

"Say, what did she mean by Sabbath?"

A window pane had been broken a few days before and the other mischievously replied:

"Why, Sabbath means window light. Everybody knows that."

"Thunder!" exclaimed the janitor. "That's mighty cheap of teacher. She broke that window light herself!"—Kansas City Times.

Sold.

It was the first performance of one of those overadvertised shows from New York.

"You don't think much of it," said the manager in surprise. "Why, the whole house is sold."

The critic smiled knowingly.

"I don't doubt it," he replied as he jotted down another roast. "I heard several people in the audience say that same thing."—Chicago News.

Well Said.

Brown—I can't go. I'm not feeling well. Isn't that a valid excuse?

Gray—No, it isn't. It's an invalid one."—Boston Transcript

OLD SORES FED AND KEPT OPEN

BY IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

Whenever a sore refuses to heal it is because the blood is not pure and healthy, as it should be, but is infected with poisonous germs or some old blood taint which has corrupted and polluted the circulation. Those most usually afflicted with old sores are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to decline, and the poisonous germs which have accumulated because of a sluggish and inactive condition of the system, or some hereditary taint which has hitherto been held in check, now force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body. The place grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes a chronic and stubborn ulcer, fed and kept open by the impurities with which the blood is saturated. Nothing is more trying and disagreeable than a stubborn, non-healing sore. The very fact that it resists ordinary remedies and treatments is good reason for suspicion; the same germ-producing cancerous ulcers are back of every old sore, and especially is this true if the trouble is an inherited one. Washes, salves, nor indeed anything else, applied directly to the sore, can do any permanent good; neither will removing the sore with caustic plasters or the surgeon's knife make a lasting cure. If every particle of the diseased flesh were taken away another sore would come, because the trouble is in the blood, and the BLOOD CANNOT BE CUT AWAY.

The cure must come by a thorough cleansing of the blood. In S. S. S. will be found a remedy for sores and ulcers of every kind. It is an unequalled blood purifier—one that goes directly into the circulation and promptly cleanses it of all poisons and taints. It gets down to the very bottom of the trouble and forces out every trace of impurity and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. changes the quality of the blood so that instead of feeding the diseased parts with impurities, it nourishes the irritated, inflamed flesh with healthy blood.

Then the sore begins to heal, new flesh is formed, all pain and inflammation leaves, the place scabs over, and when S. S. S. has purified the blood the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Write for our special book on sores and ulcers and any other medical advice you desire. We make no charge for the book or advice.
