The season has arrived when that big cleanup of the city is in order.

The Gazette believes that W. R. Ellis is better fitted to represent the people of Oregon in Congress than any other man in the race in the second district. Especially is this true in reference to Eastern Oregon.

In London the Oregon Yellow Newtown Pippin apple takes front rank in the fruit sales. These apples are in better demand, the price is three times as high as the Eastern grown product and over twice as high as apples grown any where else in the world. Oregon apples are also being shipped to Vladivostok, Russia, and are bringing in this foreign market $7.50 per box.

A systematic campaign against sheep infected with scabies in California will soon be commenced by the state veterinarian of that commonwealth, by and with approval of the governor, who has issued a proclamation to the effect that all of the sheep there must be dipped between March 15 and July 15 next, and all premises where sheep are kept must be cleaned and disinfected. The affected sheep must be dipped twice within nine days and the healthy sheep once. This work has been gone over and completed in Oregon and the benefit to the sheep industry therefrom would be hard to estimate.

We think the country merchant has the right idea about his farmer customers. He knows that he depends upon them for trade and that they depend upon him for goods and a market. This is mutual and the feeling between the two classes should be one of friendship and good will. It is mutual dependence. Yet there are those who delight to stir up enmity between the farmer and the country merchant. They do it from ulterior motives, but the farmer doesn't know it. We know of no remedy save to get as close to the agriculturist as you can. Talk with him, show him you are interested in his success, and make him see the true relationship between himself and you.—Oregon Tradesman.

The Inland Empire Wheat Growers' Association held their annual meeting at Pendleton, last Saturday. The reports submitted at the meeting show a very satisfactory condition of affairs, the original stock now being worth 100 per cent more than at the organization of the association. In speaking of the association the East Oregonian says: "All expenses have been paid, about 400,000 grain sacks have been purchased and distributed to the members and there remains $1100 on hand in the treasury. The members are pleased with the result of their sack purchases by means of the competitive system as a great saving has been accomplished in this way. The coming year promises to be better than ever and the association is now on a permanent and substantial basis. The membership promises to be greatly increased and the sack purchases for next harvest will more than double, according to the prospects now." How about that organization in Morrow county?

J. A. WOOLERY.

In the passing of J. A. Woolery a vigorous, active and useful life was cut short.

His successful career from the very bottom round of the ladder stands as a monument on which is inscribed something that if studied and absorbed by the young men starting in business and also the older ones already in business, will be of great and lasting benefit.

Joe Woolery was ambitious. Not being content with the drag and routine of the little farm in old Missouri, his ambition led him to the West.

Coming to Morrow county when a young man, fresh from the farm, his capital consisted of muscle and earnestness in application. Sheep herder, rancher, merchant, capitalist and investor, Mr. Woolery backed his judgment with all his force and energy. Reverses were brushed away, never knowing the meaning of the word fail.

In building up his own vast interests, his hand was always out for the public good.

Unselfish, he helped to build up the community along with his own interests.

IGNORED THE PRESS.

The last legislature of Oregon passed a law requiring the secretary of state to send out printed copies of the initiative measure before the people to every voter in the state, thus giving the state printer work which justly belongs to the newspapers of the state.

Before the legislature passed this unreasonable measure the newspapers of the state printed the initiative and referendum measures and thus the measures reached the voters in an attractive and readable form. The cost to the state was insignificant, compared to the service rendered by the newspapers.

With over 200 papers in the state of Oregon, every voter in the state could be easily reached through this medium, but that the state printer's enormous income might be further increased, the legislature decided that the newspapers of the state are no good anyway, and so they were deprived of this little mite of state advertising.

The work of printing and distributing 100,000 copies of the initiative measures before the people this year will cost the taxpayers three times as much as though the same work was performed by the newspapers and the publicity through the papers would have been much greater than under the present system.—East Oregonian.
