J. A. Woolery's Funeral.

valuable lands in the state of Washington, and his property in and near Portland was very valuable.

A special train of three coaches left Heppner Sunday morning at ten o'clock bearing in the neighborhood of two hundred people for Ione to pay their last respects to a man who will be missed as no other man in the county would be. The Knights of Pythias lodge of Heppner chartered the train for the occasion.

The deceased was a member of the I. O. O. F., the Knights of Pythias, the Elks, and the Masons. Three Odd Fellows lodges were represented besides the three other orders of which he was a member, and the floral offerings of these orders were grand. The city of Ione gave a magnificent floral piece, as well as numerous personal contributions.

The services were held in the yard of S. I. Stratton and were officiated over by Rev. Orr, of the M. E. church, South, of Heppner. There were nearly one thousand people in attendance and the condition of the weather was such as to favor an open air service. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery on the hill above Ione at about 2:30 under the auspices of the Odd Fellows, of which order he had been a member ever since he was twenty one years of age.

Joseph A. Woolery was married to Miss Helen Violette Wilson, of Monument, Grant county, Oregon, on December 24, 1888. The result of such union has been four girls, Audrey, Edna, Velmaletta, and Joie.

Mr. Woolery carried fifty two thousand dollars of life insurance in favor of his wife and family and in conjunction with his vast holdings makes one of the largest estates yet to be administered in Morrow county.

Sheriff Shutt returned Monday evening from Salem, where he had been to get Virgil Cowdry who was arrested charged with wanton destruction of private property. Cowdry is implicated with Earl Bozarth, Bert Bleakman, Emery Durand and others under the charge of entering a house belonging to J. C. Owens, of Hardman, and destroying stoves and other property. The rest of the crowd lay the responsibility on Bozarth and Bozarth admits his guilt but implicates the others. They all waived examination and were held over to the grand jury under $300 bonds.

Mrs. S. E. Van Vactor who was recently operated on for appendicitis is home again and is rapidly improving.

W. W. Ames, of Bay Center, Wash. is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Van Vactor.

John Zollinger was in from Hardman, Monday.
