E. M. Shutt,
Heppner, Oregon,
Dear Sir:
Having resided in this town for the past eighteen years, and having been all that time engaged in active business (13 years in general merchandising and four in banking) I can truthfully say that since this town went dry all legitimate business has improved. A larger per cent of cash sales, in proportion to the aggregate, and many instances of parties being good pay now, whereas under the saloon system they were on the "black list." The moral tone of society is much improved, and the churches are inadequate as to seating capacity and are being enlarged. Many non-residents are taking advantage of our reputation as to morals and are sending their children here to school. At the coming June election we are to try this question again, and we are very confident that this precinct, as well as the entire county, will go "dry."
Very truly yours,
Geo. S. Carpenter.
The above letters are from men of undisputed standing, who join all the other merchants of the dry counties in pronouncing prohibition a blessing from every standpoint.
E. M. SHUTT.
