WANT COYOTE BOUNTY LAW

Oregon Sheepmen Will Petition Legislature.

A bounty of from $1 to $1.50 per coyote will be asked of the legislature of this state when it convenes this winter and the request will be backed up by not only the sheepmen of eastern Oregon, but by those of the Willamette valley as well, for the hill pest is already creating great havoc among the flocks of the western part of the state.

It is estimated that the coyotes during the past year have done over $1,000,000 damage to the flocks of the state, and the sheepmen believe that the only way to exterminate the pest is to provide a bounty to make their killing worth while.

In order to get the matter before the legislature the Oregon sheep commission in its annual report will embrace a recommendation of a bounty of $1.50 to be paid for each animal killed. It will point to the success with which that plan combated the evil some years ago. The sheepmen of the state will also urge through their organization that such a bounty be given.

Sheepmen to Pay Half.
One half of the sum paid, according to the plan now under advisement, will be paid by the sheepmen through a special tax levied upon them for that purpose. This is in line with the old law.

Up until about six years ago Oregon paid a bounty of $2 per coyote. Under that system, according to Secretary Dan P. Smythe of the Oregon sheep commission, the coyotes were practically exterminated, and just at the time the county had ceased to be an expense of any importance the law was repealed. As the result the animals have increased until they are a plague greater than ever before in the state.

For the first time in many years the valley woolgrowers are with the men of eastern Oregon in this matter. In Douglas county for instance the damage to the flocks during the past year has been very great even though the county has a bounty of $25 per animal and the growers have their places fenced against coyotes, but the wily animals come over the hills from eastern Oregon and by digging under the "coyote proof" fences, have managed to do great damage.

Methodist Church.

On next Sunday, Nov. 15th, Sunday School, 9:45 a. m.; Junior League, 3 p. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7 p. m., by the pastor. Subjects, morning sermon, "How Shall We Eat the Flesh and Drink the Blood of the Son of Man?"—John vi:52; evening, "The Hand Mighty to Deliver."—Exodus xiv:21. Please note that from this date forward the evening service will begin at 7 o'clock.

The morning sermon will be an attempt to explain how the flesh of Jesus typified in the bread of the holy communion and the blood in the wine become meat and drink to the believer. After the sermon the holy communion of the Lord's Supper will be administered. We invite all believing Christians and penitent sinners who are minded to receive the communion at our hands to come to this table and be served.

The evening sermon will deal with those perfectly natural phenomena which under the hand of an ever operative providence prove great deliverances to the people of God.

Special music that will delight and help every one is being prepared for both services.
