

WASHINGTON LETTER

(Special Correspondence.)
At the present time the bureau of engraving and printing is about the busiest institution in Washington. It is turning out paper money at the rate of $4,000,000 a day, in accordance with the Aldrich-Vreeland currency bill authorizing the issuance of emergency bank notes. The work is being done both day and night, and the complete force of the establishment is occupied on the eight hour shift. As quickly as the currency is being printed it is sent to various sections of the country.

Emergency Bank Notes.
In the new notes several changes are made over the issues of 1882, the reverse on the bills under the Vreeland bill being of a completely new design. The broad square has been stripped of its scroll work, and in the white space appear the large figures "1882-1908." In the ovals at the sides are pictures of George Washington and the United States capitol. The faces of the bills will remain the same, with the exception that the words "deposited with the United States treasurer at Washington" will be eliminated and the phrase "or other securities" substituted to follow the statement that "this note is secured by bonds of the United States."

New Municipal Building.
After four years of construction work the handsome white marble home of the District government at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, to be known as the municipal building, is completed and is ready for occupancy.
The big structure will house the various branches of the local government, and the duties performed for many years in the present official home of the District authorities in Louisiana avenue will henceforth be fulfilled in the new building.

Cost Two and a Half Millions.
Possibly no edifice has been constructed in the District during the present generation that has inspired more real interest and is the cause for more pride on the part of the citizens of the nation's capital than the new municipal building. It is considered as handsome as any public structure in Washington and compares most favorably with any other municipal building in the United States.

The building is of imposing appearance. It is treated from an architectural standpoint in columnar style throughout, the rear elevation being practically the same in design as the front. The columns extend on either side as well as on the front and rear. It is believed that in the future the rear of the building will be almost equally as prominent as the front.

A Fine Recreation Ground.
Few if any of the latter day residents of the District of Columbia have failed to enjoy one or more of the features of the park along the Potomac, its smooth wide drives, its new athletic field, its shady walks, its wall abutting right on deep water for the fishermen and its cinder paths for equestrians. Then, too, all lovers of out of door life in the capital find pleasure in anticipation of the greater improvements to come, when the park is extended below its present boundary at Fourteenth street southwest all the way to the junction of the Washington and Georgetown channels, so that the entire southeastern front of the city will be a solid stretch of greensward, shaded by trees and maintained as a recreation ground for the public.

Flats Transformed.
And further comes the promise, forecasted in recently proposed legislation, contemplating the "open valley treatment" of the shores of Rock creek, that the whole system of Rock creek park and Potomac park will be converted into one great playground, affording some of the finest and longest drives of any park in any city in the world.

Scores, possibly hundreds, of the citizens of the District of Columbia remember the time when the present Potomac park was nothing but a waste of flats and swamp lands, its noisome expanse not only a blot to the southern approach to the capital of the nation, but a positive and ever present menace to the health of the community.

A Capital Goose.
One of the queer and frequent sights of Washington which in their mediaeval bizzarerie recall Don Quixote or Aesop's fables or Rabelais is that of a tall and stately goose calmly ambling down the avenue, close on the heels of its dotting master, who is a waiter at Harvey's, the time honored restaurant of the capital. The ungainly fowl, unmindful of the traffic in the busiest part of the town, pursues his friend, often capped and aproned, with the fidelity of a secret service guard. The goose and the man are the greatest chums. The spectacle is grotesque and frankish in the extreme.

Plan New Courthouse.
In a few days construction work will begin on one of the finest court buildings in the country for the District court of appeals. An appropriation of $200,000 made by congress for this purpose became available July 1.
For many years there has been a need of a separate building in keeping with the dignity of the court. In their present cramped quarters, in a small wing of the courthouse, the appellate court judges virtually have been "camping out."

The new structure will occupy a site in Judiciary square, between the United States courthouse and the pension office building and facing E street northwest. Within a year it will be ready for occupancy. In point of architectural design the building will be a model. It will be of marble construction.
CARL SCHOFIELD.

Revival Meeting.
The revival meeting at the M. E. church, South, will commence the first of next week. Rev. R. K. Triplett of Spokane will be here. There will be the best of music. No collections. Don't be scared, come along. Your presence and your betterment only is wanted.

Chicken Dinner and Bazaar.
Keep it in mind. That chicken dinner and bazaar to be given by the ladies of the South Methodist church. Time, Dec. 18. Watch papers for the place. Pretty things for the home and for Xmas presents. Chicken enough for all. Don't forget it.

Twenty-five hundred acres, including some of the finest land in the Hermiston valley, will be thrown open to settlement under the Umatilla National irrigation project in the near future.

SHE WAS CARELESS.
And So the Careful Husband Decided to Teach His Wife a Lesson.
"My wife has a disagreeable habit of leaving her pocketbook in exposed places," said the man who was telling the story. "I had cautioned her more than once that she would lose it if she wasn't more careful."
"I came downtown with her the other morning, and the first thing she did after boarding the car was to deposit her purse upon the car seat, while she relieved herself of the terrible suspicion that her hat wasn't on straight. A movement of her arms knocked the purse on the floor, where it remained until I picked it up."
"I rescued that purse no less than a dozen times before we reached the bargain counter that was the goal of my wife's ambition."
"Events around a bargain counter occur with kaleidoscopic swiftness, and I soon found myself the sole guardian of my wife's purse, which lay before me on the counter where it had been deserted by her in a mad rush for the other end of the counter."
"To teach her a lesson I emptied the contents of the purse in my pocket and retreated to the edge of the crowd to await developments."
"It wasn't long before my wife crowded her way out, triumphantly holding aloft a twenty-five cent cream jug that she had succeeded in buying for 40 cents."
"I didn't know that they charged things here," I began feebly.
"They don't," she answered. "I have money left for three ice cream sodas and a strip of car tickets." And she exhibited the contents of her purse to prove her assertion.
"I nearly fainted when it dawned upon me that I had taken the contents from a purse belonging to some other woman."
"I have no desire to retain possession, and if the woman who lost 70 cents, a postage stamp, three hairpins and a recipe for making angel food will call at my office she may have her property."—Detroit Free Press.

Finished Him.
"Yes," fratricide the artless damsel. "I have eight brothers and four sisters. There were sixteen in mother's family and fourteen in her mother's. It's funny about our family. Now, my oldest sister—"
"Maudie," gasped the young man, "you mustn't take what I've been saying to you seriously. I hope you— understand that it was only a flirtation and that when I asked you to become my wife I—er—well, you understand, don't you?"

Through Foreign Eyes.
Two foreigners were watching their first game of baseball.
"Dot was a dangerous game, yah?" said the German.
"Het must be, monsieur," replied the Frenchman. "Why, even ze catcher wears a muzzle to keep him from biting people!"—Chicago News.

Cold Weather Advice.
To all is to beware of coughs and colds on the chest; as neglected they readily lead to pneumonia, consumption or other pulmonary troubles. Just as soon as the cough appears treat it with Ballard's Horehound Syrup, the standard cure of America. Use as directed—perfectly harmless. A cure and preventive for all diseases of the lungs. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Patterson & Son.
