Woolgrowers' Meeting.

of 18,000,000 pounds, gives us a value for sheep and wool during the year of almost $11,000,000. From the best obtainable reports we find that we have exported from this state, during the present season, 430,000 sheep, which we may safely value at three dollars per head, which have returned to the state $1,290,000 as the value of our exports of live sheep for a single season.

As near as we are able to figure, there are now employed in connection with the sheep industry of Oregon, 15,000 laboring men who are receiving good wages. Aside from the men actually engaged in the caring for sheep in this state, there are vast numbers who are directly dependent upon this industry for their livelihood and existence and, therefore, from the standpoint of progress of this state, anything which would in any way menace or retard the development of the sheep industry would in an exact measure also retard the development of the entire state. It is of great importance to the welfare of this state that at the coming session of congress no action be taken which would in any measure interfere with our progress, and to this end it is essential that our tariff schedules remain as they are at present. Under protective tariff this country ordinarily imports 200,000,000 pounds of foreign wool. When this wool is brought into the United States the tariff is paid upon it and the wool is manufactured into clothing and woolen goods and a large portion of this 200,000,000 pounds is then exported to foreign countries, and the original tariff duty is then refunded to the manufacturer. This system does not bring the foreign wools into competition with our wool, but it permits them to be manufactured into clothing within our borders and supplies labor to hundreds of thousands of American citizens in the Eastern states. Under the influence of low tariff the foreign imports are very greatly increased. Thus we see by referring to imports for the year 1897 under the free wool schedule, there was imported 351,000,000 pounds of wool. But while this wool was manufactured into clothing in this country, it was not again exported from this country, and, therefore, entered directly into competition with American grown wools.

By referring to statistics we learn that during the period of free wool there was a decrease in wool production in the United States exceeding 44,000,000 pounds, with a corresponding decrease of 10,000,000 head in the number of sheep in the United States. From statistics I gather that the price of washed Ohio clothing wool during the four years of low tariff averaged 19 cents. The average for the same wool under protective tariff from 1893 to the present date has been 30 cents, thus showing a difference of 11 cents per pound in the price of wool in favor of the period of protective tariff. It would, therefore, seem that since the sheep industry is one of immense magnitude, and since such a large bulk of the population of the entire country, either directly or indirectly, depend upon this industry for their existence, that it would be extremely unwise in any manner change the present tariff schedules upon wool and woolen goods. The present tariff is not an excessive one, and merely represents the difference in costs between the raising and breeding of sheep in Australia and in the United States.

In order that this subject may be more clearly understood, I would state that an all-wool suit of clothes contains from 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 pounds of secured wool, and under a protective tariff of 12 cents a pound the increase cost to the consumer amounts to from 25 cents to 45 cents per suit. This amount is so unimportant that it has no relative bearing whatever upon the price at which woolen clothing is sold, for it is a well established fact that the value of a suit of clothes is measured by the cost of the labor consumed in its manufacture. At least 85 per cent of its cost depends upon this labor and not upon the cost of the material that may enter into its manufacture, and, therefore, if it were true that woolen goods retailed at a lower price during a period of free wool, it would be due solely to the fact that the value of labor was low rather than that wool was cheaper.

Our present congress has a republican majority, but it is not altogether safe as far as tariff on wool is concerned. You well know that free importation of wool has always been advocated by the Democratic party, with these are several Republican senators and representatives from the New England states who favor a large reduction on the tariff on wool.

Gentlemen, how are we of the western wool-growing states to protect our interests against this growing sentiment in the east, which means financial death to us? We never can do it by electing Democratic United States senators to represent us at the national capitol. To do this it will be necessary to have the proper representation at Washington, men who will have influence with the administration and who are lined up with the majority in congress, this cannot be done by sending a minority senator from this state, and I trust that every sheep man in the state will give his support and assistance to the election of a man whose political affiliations and whose past principles and present policies assures the wool growers of this state that he will stand for no reduction in the tariff on wool. Remember, wool growers, the last Democratic bill did not take the tariff of manufactured woolen goods, but it did take every cent of tariff off of raw wool, and by this means it did not injure the manufacture of woolen goods, but it did ruin the wool raisers. There is now a demand on the part of the wool-manufacturer for a removal of the tariff on wool and with the strong representation in congress that the manufacturing states now possess this may be accomplished unless the west calls to its assistance the aid of every western representative. Not only the tariff question but the policy of handling the National Forest is nearly as serious. The supervisors in charge of the several reserves have recently returned from Washington, D. C., where they have spent several weeks consulting with their chiefs. What is the result? Immediately after election notice is issued by Supervisor Schmitz of the Wenaha Reserve, that owing to the crowded condition of the range it will be necessary to make a small cut of 8 per cent on the sheep allotted in this reserve.

This is the third successive cut made on sheep during the three years existence of this reserve.

It is a well known fact that there is more grass and less stock in this reserve than in any of the reserves created with in this state within the last five years. This probably means that we shall be trimmed all down the line accordingly, that is, that we will receive proportionate reductions in each of the other reserves.

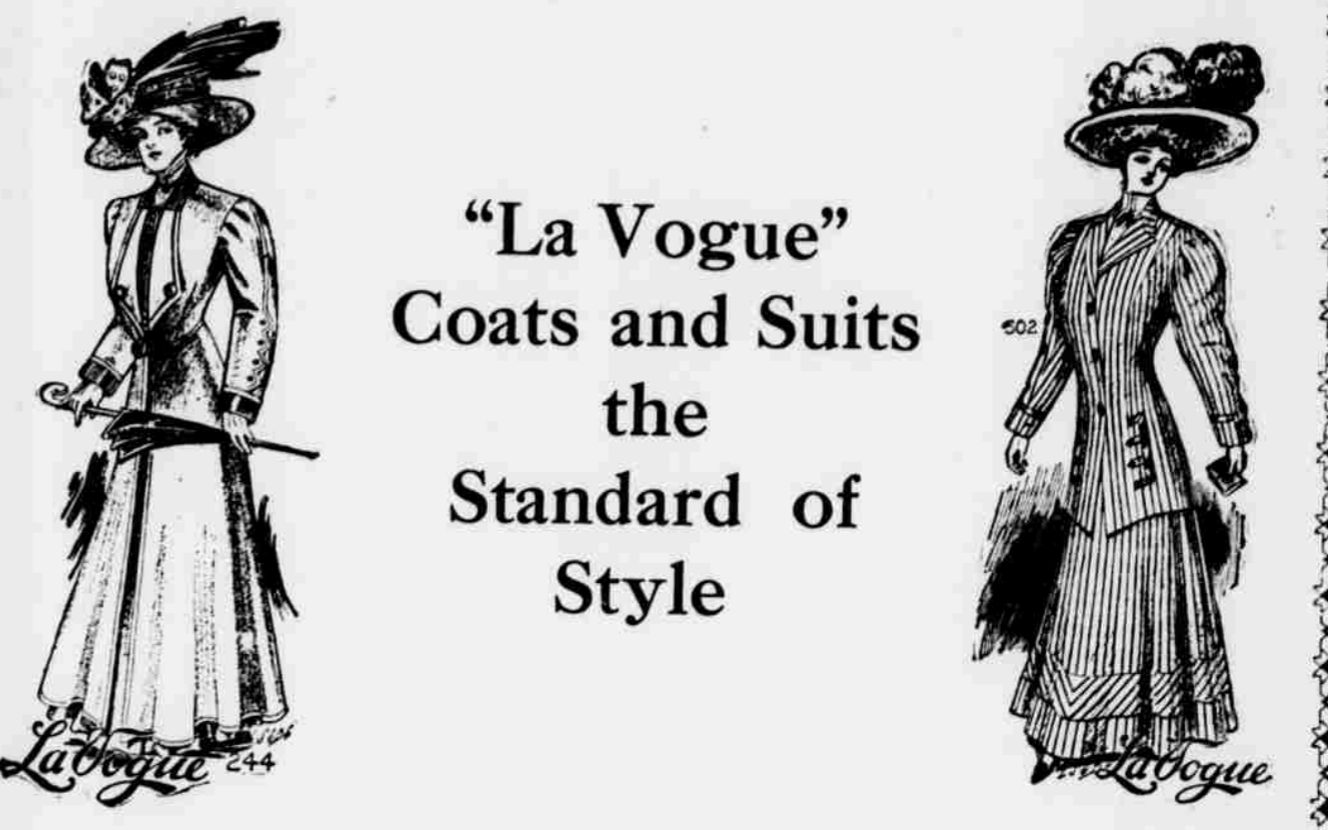

The woolgrowers of Oregon have heretofore been favorably disposed toward the general policy of handling the national forests, and have even gone so far as to assist Mr. Pinchot in some of the meetings of the National Woolgrowers Association, and modify some drastic resolutions against the forestry department that would have passed had it not been for the Oregon delegation. It now seems that we will be compelled to take up the fight and protect ourselves from this continuous reduction, or we will soon be put out of business.

Individually and collectively we have failed to occur from the forest service our just demands and I would suggest that the woolgrowers of all the western states prevail upon their congressmen and senators to stand together and by their great influence demand that the national forest service give justice and protection to the western flockmaster.

A Hair's Breadth Escape.
Do you know that every time you have a cough or cold and let it run on thinking it will just cure itself you are inviting pneumonia, consumption or some other pulmonary trouble? Don't risk it. Put your lungs back in perfect health and stop that cough with Ballard's Horehound Syrup. Price 25c, 50c, and $1.00 per bottle. Patterson & Son.

Foley's Honey and Tar clears the air passages, stops the irritation in the throat, soothes the inflamed membranes, and the most obstinate cough disappears. Sore and inflamed lungs are healed and strengthened, and the cold is expelled from the system. Refuse any but the genuine in the yellow package. Slocum Drug Co.

"La Vogue" Coats and Suits the Standard of Style

Individuality is the keynote of "LaVogue" garments. They are not mere imitations of foreign models, but the original product of high class American designers and tailors, who adopt the latest suggestions of European styles and incorporate them in their "LaVogue" fashions. Their coats and suits are cut and fashioned by custom tailors, hence their fit and finish. Every detail of their making is supervised by skilled experts. The utmost care and good judgment is exercised in the selection of findings and trimmings; in the combining of colors, the placing of buttons, etc, resulting in their unrivaled style. We are proud of our showing of "LaVogue" garments and invite inspection of our full line. Follow the footsteps of the crowds to Heppner's greatest trading mart.
