The hints that follow are merely suggestive of our stock of half hose. Not even all the prices are mentioned and a personal inspection is the only means of appreciating the variety. The best makers of Eastern houses are represented and hundreds of the patterns are exclusive. We haven't exactly "cornered the market" but we have assembled here more Hosiery of the best sorts that can be found. No good style is missing, nor any size, shade of Tans, Greens, Purples, Oxbloods, Plain or Fancy Striped, Checked or Dotted. Values 10c, 15c, 25c, 35c, 50c.

Men's Black and Brown Derby Hats at $2.50.

These hats have been made from bodies that were intended for $3 00 and $3.50 hats. We secured this lot this spring from one of the best hat concerns in the business. The maker claimed that the bodies showed slight imperfection, but since the hats have been made up we find it very hard to locate any defects. Nobody but an expert would detect the difference between these hats and those sold at $3.00 and $3.50. The blocking, binding and finishing have been done in the very best possible manner. Several heights of crowns, widths of brim. Complete range of sizes 6 5 8 to 7 1-2. All $2.50.

CATALOG HOUSE COMPETITION.

Were I to ask what is the greatest evil that threatens the future of the small retail business, I believe the answer would be almost unanimous that it is the encroaching competition of catalog houses—those pirates on the sea of domestic commerce—and the answer would be the right one. We have only to review the facts to see what an unfair situation confronts the retail business of the country.

The retail merchant helps to maintain the city, county and state government. He contributes to the wealth of the community in the employment of clerks, in the payment of rents, in taxes if owning property. He contributes to the support of every institution and every enterprise that helps his town.

He carries a stock of goods commensurate with the demands of his trade, and is there on the spot to fill every promise and make good every contract. In the spring he supplies the farmer and waits until harvest for his pay. He buys at more than the market price the produce of the farmer and enables him to turn into money much that would otherwise be lost.

How about the catalog merchant? He contributes nothing to the community from which he draws his trade. His name is not on the local tax rolls; left to him the produce would rot. He offers no market where the thrifty wife may dispose of her garden truck, her surplus butter, chickens and eggs; neither does he aid the farmer or the merchant by a generous extension of credit, nor do either look to him for help in times of crop failures or financial panics. Whoever heard of him building a private country road or bridge for the convenience of the farmer? Of what value is he to the local banker? Or the local printer or the man seeking employment? And yet the local retail merchant is daily confronted with his prices, with his catalogs, with his goods in the hands of people whom he has aided in many ways. Daily he sees instances where the people of his community have bought at no lower price, and often at a higher price, the same kind of goods that lie on his shelves and which were purchased to meet their reasonably expected patronage. It is the most unjust and deplorable condition of business that ever confronted the retail merchant of any country.

I lay down this proposition. Everything being equal, no citizen is justified in buying in foreign markets the goods which he can buy at home for the same price; and to the extent that he does patronize foreign institutions, to that extent does he impoverish his own state and community, and inflict injustice on his neighbors.—W. T. Sanford in March Zenith.

Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my backache and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now attend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed." THE STRENGTH OF A HORSE

The power of a horse to pull a load is regulated by the closeness of that load to the horse. Any calf can pull a boy all over the lot if the rope is short enough.

Your capacity to carry on your business easily and with success depends upon your bank connection—what service you get from the bank of your choice. Your future success, depending on present service, is regulated in part by whether or not you get close, personal service from your bank.

Your business success depends upon the convenience you receive, the help you get every day, in easy times and in "hard" times, when you want assistance and when you want it at the same time others do.

The bank that places its officers in close touch with customers and their business bears the same relation to the power to "push" business as the closeness of the horse to his load determines his pulling power.

Our officers are easily accessible, they are glad to give persoal counsel, they will take an interest in the success of your business.

This bank will help YOUR business. Our service is adjustable to YOUR requirements.
