According to records of the Government Forestry service and the State Board of Forestry, Oregon has been remarkably fortunate this summer in escaping the usual heavy toll taken by forest fires. The season has been marked by less destruction of timber than any in the past decade. Fires this year have been few and widely separated while losses have been small. This is thought to be partly due to an aroused public interest in preventing forest fires and a largely increased force of fire wardens throughout the forests this season.

Seeds as Aeroplanes.

It is strange that man has been so long in learning to fly. Nature in the seed has for eons shown him a good working aeroplane. The seed of the silver maple and the ash often fly in the summer forty or fifty yards. The seed's wing is an extension of the pod. When the seed breaks loose from its bough the wing whirls rapidly round the body as an axle, its front edge striking the air higher than the rest of its surface and thus producing air pressure in an upward direction that carries the tiny aeroplane on and up in Wright-like flight. The hidden seed clusters show an aeroplane of tremendous strength. The seeds hang on a single stem from the center of one large wing. When this seed aeroplane sets forth the wing revolves and points upward, bearing onward its weight of seeds with a power greater than any bird puts forth. The box elder, the pine and the catalpa are other trees whose existence is perpetuated by the aeronautical skill of their little seeds.—New York Press.

Why Women Are Afraid of Mice.

In all ages women were supposed to be more prone to superstition than men, and who knows but that the dread of a woman on the appearance of a rat or a mouse may not be due, in part at least, to an ancient superstition which has traveled down the ages from the time when our remote forefathers believed that rats and mice were the souls of the departed? Numerous are the stories which made the ancients believe that souls were rats and mice, and some of these stories are very curious.

"In Thuringia, at Saalfeld," says Baring-Gould, "a servant girl fell asleep while her companions were shelling nuts. They observed a little red mouse creep from her mouth and run out of the window. One of the fellows present shook the sleeper, but could not wake her, so he moved her to another place. Presently the mouse ran back to the former place and dashed about, seeking the girl. Not finding her, it vanished. At the same moment the girl died."

Diplomacy.

First Doctor—To what do you attribute his success as a physician?
Second Doctor—To his diplomacy. He first finds out a few things a patient doesn't like and then orders him not to eat them.—Philadelphia Record.

A Libel on the Original.

"Why is Maude so angry with the photographer?"
"She found a label on the back of her picture saying, 'The original of this photograph is carefully preserved.'"

Expensive.

"Yes," said the young wife proudly, "father always gives something expensive when he makes presents."
"So I discovered when he gave you away," rejoined the young husband.—Exchange.

A Polite Waiter.

"Here, waiter," exclaimed an irascible diner, "this beef you have given me isn't fit for a pig to eat!"
"Well, sir, don't eat it then!" the waiter advised pleasantly.—London Scraps.
