

High Character Undermuslin

OUR ENTIRE SPRING LINE JUST RECEIVED

Dozens of garments have arrived from the highest standard of excellent material from Eastern markets. Daintiness, good fabrics, good making MARR THEM ALL, and the prices are exceedingly little, so little that many women will say that just buying the fabrics and putting them together, not counting the labor, would cost them considerable more.

Come in and ask the clerks to show them to you.

Notice window exhibit this week of these Muslins, and next week view the pretty Spring patterns of LACES and EMBROIDERIES.

When Packing Plants Open.

With a complement of 500 men, the Swift Packing plant of Portland, will begin operations March 15. That means that the highest economy and efficiency known to the packing world will be applied to the industry in Portland. That in turn will be a matter of much moment to every farmer and stockman from Montana, Idaho and Utah to the Pacific. A problem with them up to the present has been to have a market that could handle consignments of livestock regardless of how great the quantities in which they might come. Oftentimes the arrival of a few carloads would glut the market and bear down the price. The grower was invariably confronted with the realization that even when the animal was ready to turn off, the market might be over supplied.

With the new plant in operation a different order should prevail. It represents an enormous investment, and must have enormous supplies of raw material for its purposes. The little shipments that formerly flurried the market will be but a drop in the bucket in the expanded establishment. A price must be paid for livestock that will make the business profitable to the grower, or a sufficient supply of raw material for the packer will not be produced. The interests of grower and packer thus become joined and blended, with the survival of one the immediate concern of the other. It should, and doubtless will, revolutionize the business of animal husbandry on the north Pacific coast. No farm can afford to be without its quota of livestock. The constant wheat cropping will kill the soil. Every ton of wheat hauled from the land carries away $7.50 worth of soil fertility. The German scientists have proven that every ton of mill feed fed to livestock on the farm adds an equal or greater value of fertility to the land. The land is his capital, and it will treat him exactly as he treats it. If he gives to it, it will give back with multiplied interest. If he takes away and gives nothing back, it will yield him less and less. If he enriches it by keeping and feeding livestock on it, the land will enrich him. The history of districts where stock feeding is greatest is a story of farmers who are thriftiest and communities richest. A new soil, a new agriculture and a richer people should be the gradually eventuating sequel to the opening of the Portland packing plants.—Portland Journal.

Attorney Frank Melvin, of Portland, was in the city the forepart of the week.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Its Effect Upon the Customer to Whom It Was Made.

A business man of Dayton, O., tells this story of some commercial friends of his:

A customer who bought in a small way from the wholesalers and whose credit was not of the sort known as gilt edged visited the city and purchased a $2,800 bill of goods, paying $2,500 in cash and giving his note for the remaining $300.

After the transaction had been closed and the paper and currency had changed hands the customer said:

"Now, after a deal of that size it is customary to give a purchaser a present. Come across with it."

"We'll throw in a pair of suspenders," laughed the salesman temporizingly.

"A pair of suspenders, eh? Say, quit fooling. I really mean it. I expect you to do something in acknowledgment of my patronage."

The salesman went to the manager with the problem, and the manager said:

"Well, if he feels that way about it we might encourage him a bit. We'll do something that ought to please him greatly. Give him back his $300 note. Make him a present of his paper. That will make him a cash customer and raise his credit and save him money besides."

The salesman went back, pleased to be the bearer of such joyful tidings of liberality in business.

"Well, sir," he said, "we've arranged about that present, all right. Here," with a flourish, "is your note. We give it back to you."

The customer did not seem enthusiastic. Instead, without looking at the note he asked:

"Is it indorsed?"

"No," said the salesman in astonishment.

"Then I guess you better gimme the suspenders," said the disappointed customer.—Chicago News.

HOW A HORSE GALLOPS.

The Natural Way and the Conventional Pose in Art.

How does a horse gallop? Owing to the rapidity of action it cannot be seen by the human eye. However, just as the individual spokes of a rapidly revolving wheel can be made visible by a flash of lightning, so the action of a galloping horse can be and has been analyzed by instantaneous photography.

The statuette of Syonby, the thoroughbred, has been made from photographs taken at the instant when all four legs are off the ground. The back is arched, the hind feet are directed forward, the fore feet backward, so that all are tucked under the animal's body.

When the limbs again touch the ground the first to do so is one of the hind feet, which is thrust far forward so as to form an acute angle with the line of the body and thus serve the purpose of a spring in breaking the force of the impact of the hoof when the horse is going at top speed.

In the conventional mode of representing a galloping horse all four legs are off the ground at once, but the front pair are extended backward in such a way that the undersurfaces of their hoofs are directed skyward, the body being at the same time brought near the ground. This conventional pose appears to have been derived from a dog running, when the front and hind pairs of legs are respectively extended forward and backward, with the soles of the hind feet turned upward.

This pose, it is thought, was adopted to represent the gallop of the horse by the goldsmiths of Mycenae between 800 and 1000 B. C., whence it was transmitted by way of Persia and Siberia to China and Japan, to return in the eighteenth century as the result of commercial relations to western Europe.—Chicago Tribune.
