The Mariner's Dream.
In slumbers of midnight the sailor-Loy lay:
His hammock swung loose at the sport of the wind,
But, watchwork and weary, his carcer flew away,
And visions of happiness danced o'er his mind.

He dreamed of his home, of his dear native bowers,
And pleasures that waited on life's merry morn;
While Memory stood sideways, half covered with flowers,
And restored every rose, but secreted its thorn.

Then Fancy her magical pinions spread wide,
And bade the young dreamer in ecstasy rise:
Now far, far behind him the green waters glide,
And the cot of his forefathers blesses his eyes.

The jessamine clammers in flowers o'er the thatch,
And the swallow chirps sweet from her nest in the wall;
All trembling with transport, he raises the latch,
And the voices of loved ones reply to his call.

A father bends o'er him with looks of delight;
His cheek is impeached with a mother's warm tear;
And the lips of the boy in a love-kiss unite
With the lips of the maid whom his bosom holds dear.

The heart of the sleeper beats high in his breast;
Joy quickens his pulses—all hardships seem o'er,
And a murmur of happiness steals through his rest:
"O God! thou hast blessed me; I ask for no more."

Ah, what is that flame which now bursts on his eye?
Ah, what is that sound which now 'larms on his ear?
'Tis the lightning's red gleam, painting hell on the sky!
'Tis the crashing of thunders, the groan of the sphere!

He springs from his hammock—he flies to the deck!
Amazement confronts him with images dire;
Wild winds and mad waves drive the vessel a wreck—
The masts fly in splinters—the shrouds are on fire!

Like mountains the billows tremenously swell;
In vain the lost wretch calls on Mercy to save;
Unseen hands of spirits are ringing his knell,
And the Death-angel flaps his broad wings o'er the wave!

O sailor-boy, woo to thy dream of delight!
In darkness dissolves the gay frost-work of bliss,
Where, now, is the picture that Fancy touched bright—
Thy parents' fond pressure, and love's honeyed kiss?

O sailor-boy, sailor-boy, never again shall home, love, or kindred thy wishes repay!
Unblessed and unhonored, down deep in the main
Full many a fathom, thy frame shall decay.

No tomb shall e'er plead to redeem for thee,
Or redeem form or frame from the merciless surger;
But the white foam of waves shall thy winding-sheet be,
And winds, in the midnight of winter, thy dirge!

On a bed of green sea-flowers thy limbs shall be laid;
Around thy white bones the red coral shall grow;
Of thy fair yellow locks, threads of amber be made;
And every part suit to thy mansion below.

Days, months, years, and ages shall circle away,
And still the vast waters above thee shall roll;
Earth loses thy pattern for ever and aye,
O sailor-boy, sailor-boy, peace to thy soul!
—William Dimond.

Justification.
The old darky had driven his fare to the hotel and was now demanding a dollar for his service.
"What!" protested the passenger, "a dollar for that distance? Why, it isn't half a mile as the crow flies."
"Dat's true, boss," returned Sambo, with an appealing smile, "but ye see, sah, dat old crow he ain't got fer w'ives an' ten chilluns to support, not to mention de keep to' de boss."—Harper's Weekly.

Odd Name Oddly Won.
At Prentwich, has a curious history, which Mr. Hackwood relates: "The house originally bore the 'Seven Stars,' but many years ago it became necessary to have its faded sign repainted. When the painter asked the landlord what he was to put on the board he received the answer, 'The same yet.' And the man took him at his word."—London News.

If it were not for the great economies to be practiced 'next month,' how would the women ever manage to save?

The Man-of-War Bird.

The frigate pelican, or man-of-war bird, is usually met with by travelers in the tropics. Although when stripped of its feathers it is hardly larger than a pigeon, yet no man can touch at the same time the tips of its extended wings. The long wing bones are exceedingly light, and the whole apparatus of air cells is extremely developed, so that its real weight is very trifling. It flies at a great height above the water, and from that elevation pounces down on fish, especially preferring the poor, persecuted flying fish for its prey. According to some authors, the name of man-of-war bird was given to it because its appearance was said to forestell the coming of a ship, probably because the frigate pelican and real frigates are equally adverse to storms, and both like to come into harbor if the weather threatens.

Irony.
"You're as hard as nails," said his trainer.
"Well," irritably answered the actor-pugilist, "wouldn't you naturally expect me to be? I wear my clawhammer coat two or three hours every night."

At the Riding School.
"Mount your horse on the left side."
"Why? What difference can that make?"
"It's the rule."
"But why should it be the rule?"
"Because in the past horsemen wore swords. They wore them on the left hip; hence had they mounted on the right side the sword would have got in the way. So they mounted on the left, and we still mount on the left. Horses are accustomed to it, and if you try to get up from the right you are liable to be kicked."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

An Obedient Dog.
Schnapps is a dachshund, and the people who know all about the breed call the queer looking animal handsome. In the house in New York where he is the pet he is credited with more than ordinary dog sense and with understanding every word said to him in English or German. In order to demonstrate his sagacity his master said to him a few evenings ago: "Schnapps, the young people have been here long enough. Go down and tell the boys to go home." Downstairs he waddled and, standing before the visiting youths, barked and howled, then ran to the front door and back again and kept up the performance until, as his proud master explained, "the young men heard and saw the point. Pretty smart for a dachs, eh?"

"Naughty, naughty," reproved grandmother. "When I was a little girl I always washed my face."
