The time to plant a new orchard or add to your present one is now—this spring. Remember this—an orchard planted this spring will be a year nearer bearing and a year nearer profit than an orchard planted next spring. Why not gain that year and that profit? The year thus saved may be the year when you would harvest your first big money-earning crop—the year when fruit prices soared and turned your orchard into a veritable gold mine.

Planting season is not governed by date, season or climatic condition but by the condition of the stock to be planted. So long as the stock is dormant, it will plant successfully weeks after your spring has opened.

These Idaho grown trees above listed are dormant—they will plant successfully and make you a model orchard and pay you profits. Every tree is a true Stark Tree—the only standard of tree you can afford to plant. You must order immediately. Send your order and remittance either to
