COUNTY PROHIBITION IS FARCE

Mayor of Tillamook Says Plan Has Proved a Failure.

The sentiment throughout Oregon is radically in favor of the movement to give each locality and incorporated city a voice in saying how its affairs, as regards the sale of liquor shall be conducted is shown by letters from business men in all lines of trade, professional men, mechanics and farmers in all parts of the state, which have been received at the headquarters of the Greater Oregon Home Rule Association. These letters have been pouring in in ever-increasing quantities, and they are especially noticeable as coming from dry counties.

A letter from Thomas Coates, Mayor of Tillamook City, to H. C. McAllister, manager of the Greater Oregon Home Rule Association, is a good sample of the letters which have been received recently. Mr Coates' letter follows:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your esteemed favor of the 29th inst., and take great pleasure in signing the application for membership in your association.

"For nearly six years Tillamook county had been a 'dry' county, so far as the law is concerned, but I believe there is just as much liquor used as ever. A large quantity is sold in violation of the law. The local officers have honestly done their best to enforce the law, but the difficulty of getting the necessary evidence is so great that it is almost impossible to secure enough to convict, and in almost every instance where there has been a conviction, the character of the witnesses and their methods of securing evidence has been so repulsive that the juries have condemned the witnesses more than the law breakers. Were it not so deplorable, the situation in Tillamook county, so far as the law is concerned, could be termed a farce. Tillamook City was always against prohibition, but the rural districts carried the day for it. As a sequence, our finances have suffered severely without checking in the least the use or abuse of liquor, besides making it much more difficult to control the places where it is sold. I have heard so many of our citizens express themselves that I am sure Tillamook county will go 'wet' at the next election, but in any event, I am heartily in accord with the plan to give incorporated cities the right to govern their own affairs, and I shall be pleased to do anything I can to help in that direction."

Campaign is Open.

The Greater Oregon Home Rule Association is not conducting a gumshoe campaign. Everything is being done open and above board. No spellbinders are employed to deliver addresses for a stipulated amount and expenses, no private detectives are hired to spy on neighbors, no political buncombe is handed out. It is a clean cut business campaign in the interests of Oregon. Men who have standing in communities, with the common welfare at stake, are furnished copies of the constitution of the Greater Oregon Home Rule Association, which set out its purpose, and are asked to file their application for membership. If they see merit in the organization they file their application for membership. If not, they are not molested, annoyed or maligned. The proposition is presented squarely to them and the association recognizes the right of every man to his own opinion.

HARVEY SCOTT IS DEAD

End of Long and Brilliant Career of Great Editor.

Baltimore, Aug. 7.—Harvey W. Scott, editor of The Portland Oregonian, died in Johns Hopkins Hospital today shortly before 6 p. m. of heart failure, 33 hours after a surgical operation for prostatectomy.

He went off the operating table Saturday morning in strong condition. This morning at 7 o'clock he began sinking and in spite of the best stimulants known to medical science his heart grew steadily weaker until the end. He was conscious almost to the last and the end was painless.

With him were his wife and one of his sons, Leslie Scott, who had accompanied him on his trip to this city for surgical relief.

In Portland Mr. Scott leaves two sons, John H. and Ambrose B., and one daughter, Miss Judith.

Mr. Scott began failing nearly three months ago from an attack of sciatica. Early in June he went to Hot Lake, Eastern Oregon, but the baths there greatly debilitated him. At last convinced that only surgery could relieve him, he started for Johns Hopkins Hospital, from Portland, one week ago last Thursday morning.

In the year 1832 there toiled into Yamhill County over the rough roads of early Oregon a prairie schooner drawn by oxen and driven by John Tucker Scott, an Illinois farmer.

In the long trip across the plains, each mile of which had been marked by hardships, the mother of the family, Anne Roleofson Scott, and one of the children, a boy of 4 years, had succumbed to the privations of the journey.

In the family of several children was one, a stalwart boy 14 years old, Harvey W. Scott, whose name was destined to become irrevocably attached to all in Oregon that in practically a half-century of time would have a bearing on Western progress, stability and right living.

Coming to Oregon with empty hands, and a knowledge only of hard work and of such books as are taught in a district school, this youth plunged into the work of reducing a wilderness to a human habitation, gained the rudiments of an education by application in leisure hours, worked his way through a pioneer university, cast his lot with a struggling newspaper, and created an editorial standard that ranked with that of the greatest journals of the country.

In 1865 Mr. Scott succeeded Samuel A. Clarke as editor of The Oregonian, which was then under the sole control of Henry L. Pittock.

Mr. Scott gave The Oregonian his continuous editorial attention until October, 1873, when he was appointed Collector of Customs for the Port of Portland, which position he retained for five years.

During that interval there was a partial change of ownership in The Oregonian. Mr. Pittock had sold a controlling interest to W. Lair Hill, who took editorial charge, and H. W. Corbett and others. In March, 1877, Mr. Scott bought the interest that the development of all of Oregon was ever uppermost in the mind of Mr. Scott. To him will be given much of the credit for the final opening of Central Oregon to railway transportation. During the recent tour through the interior of the state, Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad, said in numerous addresses that the attention of the Hill interests had been finally attracted to the opportunities for railway development in this state by the efforts of Mr. Scott. Frequent references to the isolation of the district seen in the editorial columns of The Oregonian had first attracted the attention of James J. Hill and these led to consultations on the subject with Mr. Scott. President Hill gave to Mr. Scott by name a large share of the credit for the opening of Interior Oregon.

In 1904 Mr. Scott was elected president of the Lewis and Clark Fair Association, but declined re-election in 1905, when he was succeeded by H. W. Goode. Mr. Scott was a member of the charter board, which drafted the present charter of the City of Portland. He was a member of the Arlington Club and of the Portland Commercial Club.

When the old Associated Press dissolved 12 years ago Mr. Scott took an active part in its reorganization and it was largely through his suggestion that the Associated Press was reorganized on the present co-operative basis. Upon reorganization of the association, he was elected a director and continued in office until the time of his death, making annual trips to the meetings of the board.

In 1876 he was a delegate to the Republican National convention, held at Cincinnati, and which nominated Rutherford B. Hayes President of the United States.

In 1880 Mr. Scott was a delegate to the memorable Republican National convention which nominated James A. Garfield.

At the time of his death Mr. Scott was a trustee of the Pacific University at Forest Grove, of which he was the first graduate. He had been a member of the Portland Water Board and always took great pride in Portland's water system. He was also a member of the State Text Book Commission, which chose the text books for the schools of the state.

In 1880 Mr. Scott and Mr. Corbett, and Mr. Pittock and Mr. Scott together bought the stock that had been sold to others and Mr. Scott resumed editorial charge.

During the subsequent 33 years of continuous service as editor of The Oregonian, Mr. Scott took an active part in political and civic affairs in Portland and Oregon, aside from the discussions in The Oregonian of which he was the author.

In 1886 he was the temporary secretary of the state convention of the Union party, and at numerous times in the following subsequent years he was an active participant as delegate in the Republican party conventions in Oregon.

Coos Bay cities will have a week of festivities beginning August 15. Mayors of Oregon cities have been invited to attend the Coos Bay Carnival and it is expected a Mayors' Association will be formed. There will be all kinds of water sports, races, music, clam-bakes, dances and many varied forms of entertainment for all who attend. Many are expected from Willamette Valley points and Southern Oregon, while Portland will send down a large delegation to participate.

Republicans of Morrow County.

Do not forget that the precinct meetings in the various precincts of the county will be held August 12, 1910, and in order to have the County Assembly thoroughly representative, it is necessary that we have a full attendance from each precinct.

Don't over look the date.

News of the State.

Commercial bodies of this state are being invited by the Twice-a-Week Spokesman-Review, Spokane, to express an opinion on the most promising agricultural development in their own sections and the means used to further the advancement. An interchange of ideas along these lines will be helpful. This paper has taken an active interest in the intensive development of the Northwest and is doing much to further it.

Premiums for livestock exhibited at the Harvest Festival in Portland September 5-10, have been authorized aggregating $10,000. In addition there will be a purse hung up for the races totaling $30,000. A large part of this figure, however, is paid by the entry fees whereas the livestock premiums are a straight outlay by the Fair Association. This gives the Harvest Festival a premium list equal to the State Fair, which has the most liberal premiums of any fair on the Coast. A pony, harness and cart will be given away by the Fair management on Children's Day, each child entering the grounds having an equal opportunity to secure it free.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this institution for nine years. It invigorates all vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite, strengthens and builds up pale, thin, weak children or run down people; it is no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c at all druggists.

No. 3, as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 115 pounds in spite of many remedies and the best doctors. And that I am alive today is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 160 pounds and can work hard. It also cured my four children of croup. Infalible for Coughs and Colds, its the most certain remedy for LaGrippe, Asthma, desperate lung trouble and all bronchial affections, 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free.
