A visit to the two wool warehouses in Heppner the first of the week revealed the fact that they are beginning to fill up pretty lively, although there is much yet to come. At the Heppner house the boys are beginning to "hist" a lot of the wool to the second story, so as to have plenty of room below for the final rush. The Morrow Warehouse Milling Co. have not found it necessary to do this yet, as they put off that job just as long as possible. Besides they have quite a consignment already sold that is to be shipped out in the sacks within a few days, and this will make more room on the lower floor. Saturday was a quiet day at both houses, the recent rains holding up shearing and no wool coming in as a consequence.

Memorial services were largely attended on Sunday morning at the Christian church where a splendid address was delivered by Pastor Thompson. It was a union service, the other churches of the town all joining in. There are not many of the old veterans left in this county any more, but of those remaining there was a goodly attendance. The W. R. C. of Heppner also attended in a body, and the members of Willow Lodge No. 66, L.O.O.F. were largely in evidence. The service was simple and instructive and the sermon full of good thought.

L. W. Briggs is home from a visit to points in Grant county, where he was looking up life insurance business. He found times dull over that way, and is convinced that after all Heppner and Morrow county are quite in the lead of most other sections that he has visited recently along the line of material prosperity, yet we can't boast any too loud. Crop prospects are poor in much of Grant county, according to Mr. Briggs. The low price of sheep and wool is making it hard for the people over there to get along and money is very tight.

The Jake Wattenburger crew finished up their work in Morrow county at the Minor shearing plant on Saturday. This crew has sheared 90,000 head of sheep at the Echo and Minor plants for the season's run and feel pretty well satisfied. About half of this crew left on Monday morning for Montana, and Jake, with the other half departed on Tuesday morning for Enterprise where they will have work for a month with the shearing plant there.

Our apologies are due to Supt. Notson for not publishing his article last week on the eighth grade examinations. It was handed in at a late hour when our space was filled to a point where it was utterly impossible to work anything more in that issue and we regret that we could not give it room. Bro. Notson is good natured, however, and we hope that he will not stop his paper because he was left out this once.

C. F. Angell, a woolbuyer representing the firm of Hollowell, Jones & Donald, of Boston, was in Heppner over Sunday. W. W. Smead is the local agent of this firm and has been picking up several clips, though sales have not been very lively up to date. Mr. Angell departed for outside points Monday morning.

Lloyd Hale, of Vancouver, Wash., a cousin of Miss Hazel Hale, of this city, visited his relatives here Friday. He came in time to attend the graduating exercises at the opera house, last Friday evening, in which Miss Hazel Hale took a leading part as one of the graduates.

Miss Ella Funk, teacher of music in our school, departed Saturday morning for her home at Lexington, Nebraska. She will spend the summer there, returning to Heppner in the fall to resume her duties at the opening of school.

George Bleakman was down from Hardman, Friday. He has not got his automobile established on the stage route yet, but is working on the proposition, and will be fixed up with proper transportation facilities before long.

Carl Rhea, Gus Mallory, Geo. Thomson and Prewitt Cox, spent Sunday and Monday in the mountains where they captured all the fish available. They took out with them sufficient kegs to salt down a winters supply.

H. M. Olden was in town Saturday and reports that his grain crop is in excellent growing condition at this time, but much of the grain in his section is spotted and the yield will undoubtedly be out short.
