John Hughes, B. R. Patterson, Oscar Minor and Maurice Frye constituted a party of Heppner gunners who spent a few days at Heppner Junction shooting geese, returning on Saturday. They were successful in bagging a large number of the fowls.

That was a pretty good joke on Hon. L. R. Alderman when he donated his hat to the depot force at Heppner on his departure last Thursday morning. The head piece proved to be too small for any of the fellows there, however, and it was forwarded to the Salem address of the State Superintendent. The stunt of snow-balling the Morrow county school-ma'ams came near causing him to lose his train, and in his haste to catch on to the rear end of the coach as the train was pulling out, he left the hat behind on the track.

More eggs, more pork, more milk and more butter. That is the cry everywhere, especially from the dwellers in the cities who have to consume such farm products. Farmers, take heed. Get busy, and come to the relief of those who have to depend on you for subsistence and are willing to pay the price.—Salem Statesman.

Joseph J. Donahoo.

On Tuesday, Nov. 14, 1911, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. V. Gentry, who resides one mile east of Heppner on Hinton creek, occurred the death of Joseph J. Donahoo, aged 74 years, 1 month and 17 days. The deceased has been a resident of this county for the past five or six years, making his home with his daughters, Mrs. L. V. and Mrs. M. T. Gentry. Death resulted from the infirmities of old age, and he had been down sick for a month prior to his death. Funeral services were held at the Baptist church on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. John McAllister conducting the services.

Pleasantly Surprised.

Mrs. Jeff Jones was pleasantly surprised by a number of her lady friends on Tuesday evening, it being the date of her 41st birthday. The party was arranged by Mesdames John Sprows and C. L. Keithly, and the following guests were present: Mesdames Frank Gilliam, Eugene Noble, F. N. Frye, W. O. Hill, Thos. E. Chidsey, Smith P. Devin, D. M. Ward, Jack Devore, C. L. Keithly, A. S. Akers, Vawter Crawford, John Sprows, and Misses Ina Jones and Mae Carter. Mrs. Jones was remembered by a handkerchief "shower," and the evening was very pleasantly spent in appropriate amusements.

PROMPTING AN AUDIENCE.

English Actors Give a Signal When It's Time to Laugh.

"Nothing illustrates the difference between English and American wit more, probably, than the manner in which playwrights write their lines," said Rupert Hughes. "There are few people who realize the intricacy of the science of writing a 'laugh'—that is, a line capable of producing a laugh from an audience.

"A man may write one of the funniest lines ever given to the American stage and see it ignored by an audience because of some act on the part of the producing company or one member of that company. I have seen the witliest remarks wasted because of the move of a hand or of the head of the comedian or actor who enunciated it. Then, again, the laugh is taken out of a line by the moving of some person in the stage setting or by the moving of some part of the stage setting itself. It is funny how the slightest move on the part of an actor, after reciting certain lines, absolutely eliminates the wit from what he has just spoken, so far as the audience is concerned.

"This is so of American audiences, but not so of the English theater-going public. They will not laugh unless the witicism is finished by a nod of the head or a certain movement of the body.

"It is on this account that certain comedies, great successes in this country, are absolute failures in Great Britain," he continues. "Something must be done when a 'laugh line' is spoken on the English stage to give the audience an inkling that the witicism has been completed. Then you get your laugh.

"Not so, on the contrary, with Americans. I remember of hearing of an incident involving one of Olga Nethersole's first appearances in this country. Several times during the performance the celebrated actress walked to the sides and exclaimed to the stage manager: 'What's the matter? Are they going to kiss me off? Why, they applaud before they hear the end of the lines.' In each instance she was told that the audience was quicker than the audiences to which she had been accustomed to playing. She was told the Americans grasped the meaning and the wit of her lines when she had spoken only half of them. The actress, although she received all kinds of applause during the performance, seemed disheartened."—Washington Post.

Her Importance.

Herbert Spencer once told this story of a woman of his acquaintance: "Vain as well as vulgar minded, she professed to have a high admiration of Shakespeare and was partial to reading his plays aloud and considered that she declaimed the speeches extremely well. On one occasion, after enlarging upon her reverence for him, she ended by saying: 'Ah, I often wish that he were alive and that I had him here. How we would enjoy one another's conversation!'"

Sure to Know.

"I understand that you have bought some remarkably expensive gowns here in Paris."
"Yes, but what's the use? Few people know whether a gown is really expensive or not."
"Wait until you reach the customs inspectors."—Pittsburg Post.

Some men do not make fortunes for the sake of living, but, blinded by avarice, live for the sake of money getting.—Juvenal.
