Notice for Publication.

United States Land Office, Portland, Oregon, October 26, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1905, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1907, Joseph R. Cooney, of Portland, County of Multnomah, State of Oregon, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 297, for the purchase of the 81.2 NW 1-4 of Sec. No. 12 in Township No. 1 N., Range No. 5 East, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Portland, Oregon, on Tuesday, the 5th day of January, 1907.

He names as witnesses: Charles Cooney of Portland, Oregon, Edward Trickey of Palmer, Oregon, Frank Howard of Bridal Veil, Oregon, D. E. Chaston of Portland, Oregon.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 5th day of January, 1907.

HORTICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY E. P. SMITH.

Spraying Law Upheld.

The long pending suit of T. R. A. Sellwood vs James H. Reed, for $2000 damages for cutting down 34 Prune trees while acting in an official capacity as fruit inspector, ended in a verdict for the defendant. Judge McBride's ruling's were concise and to the point sustaining the law in every detail.

He said there were only three propositions to be considered: whether or not the orchard was infected; whether the plaintiff had been given notice and time in which to spray, and whether he had sprayed. He defined the duties of the inspector and said that when that official found an infected orchard, it was his duty to notify the owner, and if the owner then neglected or refused to spray his trees, the inspector could at his discretion, cut down the trees or spray the orchard, and the expense would then become a lien upon the property. He ruled that it was not necessary for the inspector to warn of the consequences that might ensue in the event of failure to spray, and that ignorance of the law was no excuse.

This case has in fact been a test of the horticultural law and has been bitterly fought by both sides, many people claiming they had a right to keep an infected orchard if they wished to, regardless of the rights or wishes of others. It means the uprooting of numbers of old orchards, that have ceased to pay and the placing of fruit growing upon a basis, where the grower who wishes to grow and market clean fruit does not come in competition with the fruit from neglected, pest infected orchards.

GRANGE NOTES

J. Yoohees writes from North Powder, Oreg., under date of Nov. 12, that he has organized a grange in what is called the Hudson Country with 71 charter members. He expected to organize at North Powder. He will spend some time in Union County.

Mrs. Clara H. Waldo spent last week in Culliam, lecturing and inspecting granges. She was in The Falls Sunday Nov. 18, but was so ill that she has had to postpone all her appointments for two weeks. She had expected to speak at Boyd, Ramsey, Dufur, Tygh, Wamic and Wapinitia and inspect the Mosier, Pine Grove and Frankton granges.

State Deputy F. M. Gill spent several days last week advertising the addresses Mrs. Waldo expected to make in Wasco County. He will begin organization work at some point in Wasco County next week.

The Multnomah granges have 1000 members instead of 100 as an error made it read in the article of a few days ago.

Postal Order Regarding Box Rents

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13, 1906.—Order No. 1291, Paragraph 2, Section 348, Postal Laws and regulations is amended to read as follows.

"Box rents must be collected at the beginning of each quarter for the entire quarter, but no longer. Ten days before the last day of each quarter postmasters are required to place a bill (on Form 1538 or 1538 1-2) bearing the date of the last day of the quarter in each rented box. If a box holder fails to renew his right to his box on or before the last day of a quarter the box shall then be closed and offered for rent and the mail will be placed in the general delivery."

F. H. HITCHCOCK,
Acting Postmaster General.

The Pillar of Light.

But the royal navy does not encourage neurosis. The lighthouse keeper felt that a minor crisis had arrived. It must be dealt with promptly.

The evil odor which still adhered to the boat told him that Brand had exchanged one inferno for another when he clambered out of the reach of the blindly venomous shark.

He looked up to Jones, "Lower away," he said promptly. "Swing the derrick until I grasp the tackle, and then hoist me aboard."

This was done. Ungainly in his walk, owing to his wounded limb, Jim, clinging to a rope, had the easy activity of a squirrel.

"Now lower a jug with some brandy. He's dead beat," he added.

While Jones hastened for the spirit, the sailor stooped and threw back the sail.

Lying in the bottom of the boat, wrapped in a blanket which unavailing struggles had rumbled into a roll beneath the arms, was an infant whose precise age it was impossible to estimate forthwith owing to the emaciated condition of its body.

With the rocking of the boat the foul bilge water washed around the child's limbs and back. Instinct alone had saved it from drowning. Perhaps during the first hours of vigor after abandonment the little one might have rolled over in infantile search for food and human tenderness, but the rush of salt water into eyes and mouth must have driven the tiny sufferer to seek instantly the only position in which life was possible.

So far as the man could judge in a first hasty glance, the child's clothing was of excellent quality. Yet he gave slight heed to such considerations. Jim was the father of three lusty youngsters who were snugly in bed in Penzance, and the sight of this forlorn sea wail made his eyes misty.

He reached down, unpinning the blanket, which was secured with a brooch, and lifted the infant out of its unpleasant environment. It was piteous to see the way in which the shrunken hands at once strove to clasp his wrists, though they were all too feeble to achieve more than a gentle clutch which relaxed almost as soon as the effort was made.

Jones, also a husband and father, thought him when he reached the storeroom; hence when the windlass lowered a basket there was not only a supply of brandy within, but also a bottle of fresh milk, which reached the Gulf Rock, by arrangement with a fisherman, whenever weather permitted.

Jim handed the jug to his exhausted companion. "Here, cap'n," he said cheerfully. "Take a couple of mouthfuls of this. It'll warm the cockles of your heart. An' the sooner you shin up the ladder and get them soaked rags off you the better. Can you manage? It's a near thing for the kid, if not too late now."

Brand needed no second bidding. He did not wish to collapse utterly, and the soft breeze, rendered chilly by his wet garments, had revived him somewhat.

The resourceful sailor did not attempt the foolish process of pouring even the smallest quantity of milk into the baby's mouth. He produced a handkerchief, steeped a twisted corner in the milk and placed it between the parched, salt blackened lips.

This rough expedient for a feeding bottle served admirably. The child's eagerness to gulp in the life giving fluid was only matched by the tender care of the sailor in his efforts to appease its ravenous hunger.

He was so intent on this urgent task that for a little while he paid no heed to Brand. Jones, forty feet overhead, took the keenest interest in the baby's nurture.

"Mind you don't let it suck the handkerchief into its little throat," he cried. "Not too much, Jim. It's on'y a young 'un. Half milk, half water an' a lump of sugar; my missus says. Pore little dear! However did it come to live, when that man must 'a' been dead for days. Now, Jim, slow an' sure is the motto. S'pose you shove it into the basket an' let me hoist it up here. A warm bath an' a blanket is the next best thing to milk an' water."

"All right, skipper. Just hold on a bit. She's doin' fine."

"Is it a he or a she?"

"I dunno. But I guess it's a gal by the duds."

The baby, in the sheer joy of living again, uttered a gurgle cry, a corn-pounding of milk, happiness and pain.

"There! I told you!" shouted Jones angrily. "You think every kid is a hardy young savage like your own. You're overdoin' it, I say."

"Overdoin' wot?" demanded the sailor. "You don't know who you're talkin' to. Why, when I was on the West Coast I reared two week-old monkey's this way."

Soon these firm friends would have quarreled—so unbounded was their anxiety to rescue the fluttering existence of the tiny atom of humanity so miraculously snatched from the perils of the sea.

But Stephen Brand's dominant personality was rapidly recovering its normal state.

"Jim," he said, "Mr. Jones is right. The child must be made comfortable. Her skin is raw and her eyes sore with inflammation. The little food she has already obtained will suffice for a few minutes. Send her up."

"The 'Mr. Jones' was a gentle reminder of authority. No further protest was raised, save by the infant when supplies were temporarily withheld, and Jones was too pleased that his opinion should be supported by Brand to give another thought to his subordinate's outburst.

"Now, back up to the rock," said Brand. "I will cross and rejoin you quickly. The boat must be thoroughly examined for help. Meanwhile you might as well be left high and dry."

The sailor's momentary annoyance fled. There was much to be done, and no time should be wasted in disputes concerning baby culture.

"Sure you won't slip?" he asked as Stephen caught hold of the ladder.

"No, no. It was not fatigue, but sickness which overcame me. The brandy has settled that."

Up he went, as though returning from his customary morning dip.

"Ty Jingo, he's a plucky 'un," murmured Jim admiringly. "He ought to be skipper of a battleship instead of housemaid of a rock light. Dash them sea crows! I do hate 'em!"

He seized an oar and lunged so hard and true at a cormorant which was investigating the shark's liver that he knocked the bird a yard through the air. Discouraged, it retired with a scream. Its companion darted to the vacant side and pecked industriously. The neighborhood of the rock was now alive with sea gulls.

In the water many varieties of flimsy shapes were darting to and fro in great excitement. Jim laughed.

SANDY.

Mrs. Malor was taken suddenly ill while in Portland last week. It will be pleasing news to her many friends to learn that she is convalescing.

Ed. Bornstedt was in attendance at the Bell-Kopper wedding on Sandy Ridge Sunday.

There was an enthusiastic road meeting held in Junker's hall Saturday evening a special tax of 5 mills was levied.

O. Shidder, of Salmon River, was seen in Sandy on Sunday.

Max Winche, who is working at Fairview, visited here Sunday.

Miss Florence McElroy is spending her Thanksgiving vacation with her folks of this place.

Dave Douglas, of Cherryville, was seen on our streets on Sunday.

A. G. Bornstedt was transacting business at Aims on Monday.

Hon. C. B. Dimick, of Oregon City, attended the road meeting Saturday evening.

B. F. Hart, the rustler, run out of beef Saturday and had to go back home and kill another beef in order to fill his orders who says Sandy can't support a butcher.

There are rumors of a new business venture in Sandy particulars later.

Johnson & Co. are pushing the work on their sawmill plant and you may soon hear their whistle blow.

J. G. Dethozer, who ought to be our next road supervisor, was in attendance at the road meeting Saturday.

Mac Thomas, and son George, passed through Sandy on Sunday bound for the turkey shoot at Donahue's mill.

Lee McCabe captured first prize at the shooting tourney Sunday.

Peter Pashall, who is falling timber for Johnson Bros, visited at his home Sunday.

"Shadow" tendered his resignation as porter and chore boy at Hot-l Sandy on Saturday. It has not been decided whether it is to be accepted.

Mr. Keil, with Closset & Levers, called on our merchants Tuesday.

The road from Duncan's ranch to the main road at a point 1 1/2 miles from Sandy on which two taxpayers reside is to receive 25 per cent. of the special road tax while the road from Duncan's ranch to Sandy on which fourteen taxpayers reside receives nothing. Is this fair?

Mrs. J. N. Bramhall, of Aims, visited in Sandy Monday.

P. Magnolia, of Dover, is working for Strauss Lumber Co.

J. H. L. Maybee celebrated his birthday Sunday in a way he had not planned. A large number of neighbors old and young gathered at his home without an invitation from him and gave him an old time surprise. That Mr. and Mrs. Maybee, and their daughter, are royal entertainers may be surmised from the fact that the guests would scarce leave the next morning.

KELSO.

KELSO, OREGON, Nov., 26, 1906.—

A wedding took place at the Bell home on Sandy Ridge Sunday, Nov. 25th, at noon, when Alfred Bell and Mrs. Alpha Kopper were united in marriage. Rev. Dobbelpfuhl, of Sandy, officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Maggie Smith as bridesmaid, and Fred Bates acted as best man. About thirty relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony after which a bounteous repast was served. The couple received a number of beautiful and useful presents and the good wishes of their many friends for a long and happy life. They will make their home at Proctor & Beers' mill near Sandy where Mr. Bell is employed.

Kelso was well represented at the road meeting at Sandy Saturday. The meeting was a decided success. Harmony prevailed. Judge Dimick was present and made an excellent speech. A fine mill tax was voted to improve the main thoroughfare, and the side roads are also to receive a percentage.

Victor Johnson and Joel Jarl with their families visited Sinald's, Sunday.

Chas. Sharuke, the busy painter and paper-hanger, was seen in Kelso Sunday.
