A law suit in regard to labor on a wood road at Barton was held last Saturday at the office of the Justice of the Peace, J. T. Jonsrud, in which J. E. Simons was the plaintiff and two Japs, G. Nii and Geo. Matsuo were the defendants. They had a jury trial and the case was decided in favor of the plaintiff. H. Lake of Orient was the attorney for the plaintiff and L. E. Crouch of Portland, attorney for the defendants.

Mr. Scott has sold his timber to Jonsrud brothers.

The article on "The Old Fashioned Woman" in last week's "Herald" is one of the many good editorials which is worthy of perusal by all readers of the Herald. The type of woman described in that article is certainly far in advance of the present day woman who neglects home and children and the highest and holiest duties in order to shine in society. Were there more of these old fashioned women nowadays there would be fewer unhappy and broken up homes than is the case now.
