

Necessaries for the Cook

If the old adage is true that the way to win a man's heart is through his stomach then we are the instruments for furnishing necessities for the discriminating cook.

As in the past, we shall endeavor to carry a full line of Red Cross and Monopole goods which are the best. Also a full line of the leading brands of Footwear, Overalls, Jumpers, Shirts, Underwear and Socks. We also carry a full line of hand-made Trunks and suit cases. If you are wanting Hardware, Tools, Stoves, or nearly anything used on the farm come and see us. We will treat you right.

Once there was an old maid who said she did not need to marry, she had a parrot that swore, a monkey that chewed tobacco and a cat that went out nights. The man who has an Edison phonograph might say he never needs to go anywhere for amusement as he has an instrument that will play dance music, sing the popular songs, tell funny stories, render the old ballads, give selections from grand opera and play ragtime, all with equal facility.

If you doubt what we say call and be convinced. It is true we have them with a full line of records.

The Pillar of Light

helps the resemblance. Probably it is her father's."

Then the loud silence of the light-house appalled her. The singing had ceased or was shut off by a closed door. One might as well be in a tomb as surrounded by this tangible darkness. The tremulous granite, so cold and hard, yet alive in its own grim strength, the murmuring commotion of wind and waves swelling and dying in ghostlike echoes, suggested a grave, a vault close sealed from the outer world, though pulsating with the far-away existence of heedless multitudes. Thus, brooding in the gloom, a tortured soul without form and void, she awaited the return of her messenger.

Constance, after looking in at the hospital, went on to the service room. Her father was not there. She glanced up to the trimming stage, expecting to see him attending to the lamp. No. He had gone. Somewhat bewildered, for she was almost certain he was not in any of the lower apartments, she climbed to the little door in the glass frame. Ah! There he was on the landward side of the gallery. What was the matter now? Surely there was not another vessel in distress. However, being relieved from any dubiety as to his whereabouts, she went back to the service room and gave herself the luxury of a moment's rest. Oh, how tired she was! Not until she sat down did she realize what it meant to live as she had lived and to do all that she had done during the past four hours.

Her respite was of short duration. Brand, his oilskins gleaming with wet, came in.

"Hello, sweetheart! What's up now?" he cried in such cheerful voice that she knew all was well.

"That was exactly what I was going to ask you," she said.

"The Falcon is out there," he replied, with a side nod toward Mount's bay.

Constance knew that the Falcon was a sturdy steam trawler, a bulldog little ship, built to face anything in the shape of gales.

"They can do nothing, of course," she commented.

"No. I stood between them and the light for a second, and they evidently understood that I was on the lookout, as a lantern dipped several times, which I interpreted as meaning that they will return at daybreak. Now they are off to Penzance again."

"They turned safely then?"

"Shipped a sea or two, no doubt. The wind is dropping, but the sea is running mountains high."

He had taken off his oilskins. Constance suddenly felt a strong disinclination to rise. Being a strong willed young person, she sprang up instantly.

"I came to ask you if you can see Mrs. Vansittart," she said.

"Mrs. Vansittart!" he cried, with a genuine surprise that thrilled her with a pleasure she assuredly could not account for.

"Yes. She asked if she might have a word with you."

He threw his hands up in comic despair.

"Tell the good lady I am up to my eyes in work. The oil is running low. I must lie me to the pump at once. I have my journal to fill. If there is no sun I cannot heliograph, and I have a host of signals to look up and get ready. And a word in your ear, Connie, dear. We will be 'at home' on the rock for the next forty-eight hours. Give the lady my very deep regrets and ask her to allow me to send for her when I have a minute to spare some hours hence."

She kissed him.

"You dear old thing," she cried. "You will tire yourself to death. I am sure."

"He caught her by the chin.

"Mark my words," he laughed. "You will feel this night in your bones longer than I. By the way, no matter who goes hungry, don't prepare any breakfast until I come to you. I suppose the kitchen is your headquarters?"

"Yes, though Emil has had far more of Mr. Pyne's company. She is cook, you know."

"Is Pyne there too?"

"He is laundry maid, drying clothes."

"I think I shall like him," mused Brand. "He seems to be a helpful sort of youngster. That reminds me. Tell him to report himself to Mr. Emmett as my assistant—if he cares for the post, that is."

He did not see the ready spirit of mischief that danced in her eyes. She pictured Mr. Pyne "fixing things" with Mr. Emmett "mighty quick."

When she reached the first bedroom floor Mrs. Vansittart had gone.

"I thought it would be strange if she stood long in this draft," mused Constance. She opened the door. The lady she sought was leaning disconsolate against a wall.

"My father"—she began.

"I fear I was thoughtless," interrupted Mrs. Vansittart. "He must be greatly occupied. Of course I can see him in the morning before the vessel comes. They will send a ship soon to take us off?"

"At the earliest possible moment," was the glad answer. "Indeed, dad has just been signaling to a tug which will return at daybreak."

There was a joyous chorus from the other inmates. Constance had not the requisite hardihood to tell them how they misconstrued her words.

As she quitted them she admitted to herself that Mrs. Vansittart, though disturbing in some of her moods, was really very considerate. It never occurred to her that her new acquaintance
