ly withdrew her hand. It seemed to her that he would clasp her in his arms forthwith without spoken word. Her action served to steady him, and he laughed, so softly and pleasantly that their fear was banished.

"Girls," he said slowly, "I have been parachuting through space for a minute or so. I'm all right. Everybody is all right. But my head swims a bit. If I come back forgetting my name and the place where I last resided, remember that once I loved you."

He left them. He could not trust himself to say more.

"That letter was from his uncle, I suppose," said Enid, awe-stricken.

"It must be something very dramatic which would make him act so strangely. Why has he run away? Was he afraid to trust us with his news?"

There was a sharp rebuke in Constance's voice which did not escape her sister's sharp ears.

"Constance!" said Enid quietly, "as sure as Jack loves me, that man is in love with you."

"Enid!"

But the other girl laughed with a touch of her saucy humor.

"Why did he look at you in that way just now? Didn't you think he was going to embrace you on the spot? Constance!"

"It was at you he was looking."

"Not in the way I mean. He gazed at me as if I were a spirit. But when you touched him he awoke. He might have been asleep and suddenly seen you near him. I wonder he didn't say, 'Kiss me, dearest, and then I will be sure it is not a dream.'"

"Constance discovered that she must defend herself.

"Mr. Pyne hardly conveyed such unutterable things to me," she said, conscious that a clean face betrays a flush which smudges may hide. "Have you had a letter from Jack that you can interpret other people's thoughts so sweetly?"

"No, dear. Jack has not written. I have found out the cause. His mother expresses the hope that he will be the first to convey her good wishes. So I think he meant to try to bring the rope himself. Dad knew it and Mr. Pyne. That is why they did not tell us."

Constance gathered her letters into a heap. The tiny pang of jealousy which thrilled her had gone.

"Eighty-one hungry mouths expect to be filled to repletion tonight," she said. "No more gossip. What curious creatures women are! Our own affairs are sufficiently engrossing without endeavoring to pry into Mr. Pyne's."

"Constance, don't press your lips so tightly. You are just dying to know what upset him. But, mark my words, it had nothing to do with any other woman."

Wherein Enid was completely mistaken; she would never commit a greater error of judgment during the rest of her days.

When Pyne quitted the kitchen his intent was to reach Brand without delay. As he passed Mrs. Vanstittart's bedroom he paused. Something had delighted him immeasurably once the first shock of the intelligence had passed.

He seemed to be irresolute in his find, for he waited some time on the landing before he knocked at the door and asked if Mrs. Vanstittart would come and speak to him.

"Are you alone?" she demanded, remaining invisible.

"Yes," he said.

Then she appeared, with that borrowed shawl still closely wrapped over her head and face.

"What is it?" she said wearily.

"You have had a letter from my uncle?"

"Yes, a charming letter, but I cannot understand it. He says that some very important and amazing event will detain him in Penzance after we reach the place. He goes on—but I will read it to you. I am quite bewildered."

She took a letter from her pocket and searched through its contents until she found a paragraph. She was about to read it aloud when some one came down the stairs. It was one of the officers, yet Mrs. Vanstittart was so furious that she dropped the sheet of paper and bent to pick it up before Pyne could intervene.

"Oh, bother!" she cried. "I am dreadfully nervous, even now that we are in no further peril. This is what I wish you to hear."

And she read:

Nothing but the most amazing and unlooked-for circumstances would cause me to ask you to postpone the date of our marriage for at least a month after you reach shore. This is not the time nor are your present surroundings the place for selling you why I make this request. Suffice it to say that I think—indeed, I am sure—a great happiness has come into my life, a happiness which you, as my wife soon to be, will share.

The American, while Mrs. Vanstittart was intent on her excerpts from his uncle's letter, studied all that was visible of her face. That which he saw there puzzled him. She had suffered no more than others, so he wondered why she wore such an air of settled melancholy. Throughout the lighthouse glow was dispelled. The sick became well, the lethargic became lively. Even the tipplers of methylated spirits, deadly ill before, had worked like Trojans at the rope, as eager to rehabilitate their shattered character as to land the much needed stores.

What trouble had befell this woman, as gracious, so facile, so worshipful in her charm of manner and utter-

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

Portland to Villa Avenue will be allowed or not.

Mrs. Mitchell, librarian at the Villa library, reports an attendance of 1083 at that popular institution for the month of March, also a gift of 36 valuable books from Miss Grace Gillman; also a contribution of publications including Amateur Garden Magazine, Harpers Weekly, Ladies Home Journal, St. Nicholas Magazine, Scientific American, Youth's Companion and others.

The committee from the Mothers Home Training Association, consisting of Meslames Sullivan and Bowland, and Misses Matlock and Hammond, who have had the library work in charge, have been re-elected. The Association feel justly proud of the work of this committee in behalf of the library, and they desire to keep them in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wrigert, who are on their way to Europe, telegraphed from Cincinnati, Ohio, to H. B. Dickinson that they were heartily in favor of the proposed improvement to Villa avenue. After their return from Europe (about August 1st) Mr. and Mrs. Wrigert will build a modern cottage on the corner of Villa Avenue and Meridian street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Aylsworth's three-year old girl Bessie has been suffering for several days from a severe cold.

Mid term examinations at the Montavilla schools commence today.

Chas. Hyle, one of the enthusiastic supporters of Villa street improvement, is very hopeful of the situation along that line.

Irving Bros. of McMinnville bought the stock of Fulton & Beach and are moving it to their store at McMinnville.

Jerry La Follette of Iowa and Henry Spangfield of Salem were guests of Mr. and Mrs. La Follette this week.

William Reed of Woodland, Wash., is at his home on Pearl street for a few days.

Mrs. Frakk Sparger was visiting friends in the Villa this week.

Mrs. Laraway was recently operated on for cataract of the eye at the Good Samaritan Hospital.

Mrs. Blanch Huffman and baby have both been suffering from whooping cough.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Trudigan of 211 Villa avenue, who recently bought the business of Mr. McGinty, are well pleased with their new location. They came from Cornwall, England, about a year and a half ago, but are much impressed with the opportunities to be found in Oregon, and especially in Montavilla.

Russellville Notes

W. W. Howitt while in the city a few days ago was run over by a horse and delivery wagon on the corner of Fifth and Alder streets. One of his ribs was broken and several internal injuries were received. Pure carelessness on the part of the driver caused the accident, and he ought to be made to pay for damages.

Gordon Biles, while chopping wood recently, cut a gash in a new shoe, just missing his toes. It was only a short time ago that his brother cut his foot with an ax—and in fact he is not well yet.

Mrs. L. D. Thomas, mother of Mrs. Homesly, slipped and fell on a wet piece of ground recently. When she was picked up (unconscious) it was found that her shoulder was badly sprained.

The Herald acknowledges many favors at the hands of two of Russellville's popular citizens, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Howitt.

"Then what are we quarreling about?"

He laughed in his careless way to put her at her ease. She frowned meditatively. "He who could smile in such a dazzling fashion had lost her art of late."

"You are right," she said slowly. "I am just a hysterical woman, starting at shadows, making mountains out of molehills. Forgive me."

As Pyne v. at on up the stairs his reflections took this shape:

"The old man shied at telling her outright, I wonder why. He is chock full of tact, the smoothest old boy I ever fell up against. He thinks there may have been little troubles here, perhaps. Well, I guess he's right."

In the service room he found Brand cleaning a lamp calmly and methodically. All the stores had been carried downstairs and the storeroom key given over to the purser.

"I am glad you have turned up," said the lighthouse keeper. "Oblige me by opening that locker and taking back the articles I purloined recently. If the purser asks for an explanation, tell him the truth and say I am willing to eat this stuff now for my sins."

Pyne noted that Brand's own letters lay in a small pile on the writing desk. With two exceptions, they were unopened. As a matter of fact, he had glanced at the superscriptions, saw that they were nearly all from strangers and hid them aside until night fell and the lighting of the lamps would give him a spare moment.

"I'll do that with pleasure," said the American, "but there's one thing I want to discuss with you while there is a chance of being alone. My uncle says he has written to you."

"To me?"

"Yes. It deals with an important matter too. It concerns Enid."

"Mr. Trill has written to me about Enid?" repeated Brand, stopping his industrious polishing to see if Pyne were joking with him.

Much Money, Much Trouble.
 The big Wolcott (N. Y.) grange, with its over 900 membership, is so financially prosperous that it doesn't want its members to pay the $120 a year dues each, but only 50 per cent thereof. Consequently the state master has been obliged to require them to pay the legal amount of dues in conformity with the state grange constitution or give up their charter. We have no doubt that the matter will be amicably adjusted.

There is one grange in Oregon without an American in it. State Master Buxton says its members are intelligent and anxious to acquire information concerning our institutions.

Notice for Publication.
 Timber Land, Act June 3, 1905.
 United States Land Office, Portland, Oregon, October 29, 1906.
 Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1905, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as amended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, Joseph R. Cooper, of Portland county of Multnomah, State of Oregon, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 2097, for the purchase of the S. 1/2 of S. W. 1/4 of Section No. 12, in Township No. 1 North Range No. 5 East and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver at Portland, Oregon, on Wednesday the 17th day of April, 1907.

He names as witnesses: Charles Cooper of Portland, Oregon; Edward Trevey of Palmer, Oregon; C. O. Gullander of Portland, Oregon; J. T. Bostick of Hood River, Oregon.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 17th day of April, 1907.
